No Europe for Roosevelt.
Cedars of Lebanon.
One Big Word BEER.
Who for 1936?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EUROPE HOPES for a visit from Gov. Roosevelt before March 4, and London hears that he is "indulgent on debt," is going over "to get first hand information."

The average American thinks first hand information is right here in America now. There is no doubt that we LENT the money, no doubt that they owe it.

There is considerable doubt about their paying it, and the question is whether the new President of the United States would rather have Europe's debts paid by Europe or paid by American taxpayers. You will be pleased to know that Gov. Roosevelt is not going to Europe.

THE FRENCHMAN who bosses the Lebanese republic, where cedars of Lebanon once grew so beautifully, finds Lebanese unfit for parliamentary government. Their politicians acquire big fortunes, create new offices and impose heavy taxes.

That to America is amusing news. More serious news and sad, tells about the cedars of Lebanon. There are only a few left, in a small enclosure protected from vandals and cattle. Once Lebanon's forest supplied treeless Egypt.

King Solomon, if he gets news of the earth where he is now, will be sorry to hear about that. He liked cedars of Lebanon.

THE IMPORTANT word just now is BEER. Washington reports that Mr. Garner and Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, and Reed, of Pennsylvania, will propose a beer bill in December. Beer will be welcome to many workers, and a light wine bill would please many workers of Latin origin.

"Lifting the ban" on alcohol should be limited to beer and light wines, which as Thomas Jefferson remarked, helped the cause of real temperance.

Whisky, gin, brandy and similar concoctions should be classed with other drugs and sold only on a doctor's prescription.

REPUBLICANS ALREADY discuss "a candidate for 1936" and names are suggested. Nineteen thirty-six is a long way off, and when that year does come around the people's ideas concerning available presidential timber may have changed considerably.

The "right Republican" for 1936 will depend on the successes and the mistakes of Democrats in the meanwhile.

TEMPERAMENTAL Wall Street sobbed and frowned on Wednesday—prices went down. Yesterday Wall Street smiled, with prices going up from one to six points for the day.

That's encouraging, but the wise man will study big corporation reports of profits and losses during this quarter rather than little figures on the ticker.

NEW YORK'S unemployment relief committee finds "a marked increase in serious illness in families of the unemployed; a shocking increase in cases of under-nourishment among children, and 86 per cent increase in the number of night's lodgings provided by the municipal lodging houses. The number of women and children seeking shelter increased by 171 per cent."

Such conditions represent too big a job for private relief. It is the business of the government to see that citizens do not go hungry, or women and children beg for a place to sleep.

JAPAN SUGGESTS that the League of Nations bar poison gas absolutely, nations not even allowed to use gas against those that might use it against them. Japan would even forbid manufacture of "material for defense against poison gas." That is all interesting.

BUT THE United States, which does not attack other nations, and does not propose to be successfully attacked by anybody, should have for its defense everything known to science, including the most deadly gases, and the most powerful air and submarine fleets. We should be able to say to other countries:

"Don't disturb us. We shall not disturb you. Come here and see that for yourselves that if you do disturb us you will be wiped out, and no advice from the League of Nations will be asked."

CLIPPERTON ISLAND, 1,000 miles out in the Pacific Ocean, southwest of Mexico, is turned over to France by the Mexican government without struggle or protest.

That island, occupied in turn by Spain, England, the United States, Costa Rica, France, Mexico, was finally claimed by France, and the question submitted for arbitration to King Victor Emmanuel, of Italy. Italy decides for France and Mexico acquiesces. It's a good way to settle international disputes, but you can't depend on it.

ROOSEVELT SPURS BEER ACTION

Wants Modification At Short Session, Friends Say

International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Modification of the Volstead law at the lame duck session of Congress is the first objective of President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, it was hinted today by his close associates.

Mr. Roosevelt will confer with Southern Congressmen at Warm Springs during the week following Thanksgiving, and he is expected to urge them to support beer legislation at the forthcoming short session.

It was recalled at the Capitol today that early in the campaign, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the belief that a sweeping Democratic victory at the election would be a mandate on the short session of Congress to modify the Volstead law.

TAX ANGLE

By modifying the Volstead act, he pointed out in several of his campaign speeches, the way would be open for a federal tax on beer to aid in balancing the budget. He estimated that the federal revenue would be increased at least $300,000,000 annually through such a tax.

Whether President Hoover would approve a beer bill, should one be enacted at the short session of Congress, is a matter of widespread speculation among Mr. Roosevelt's advisers.

Mr. Roosevelt would like to have the federal budget balanced before he takes office, and he is known to feel that the first step in that direction should be the enactment of beer legislation.

Southern Leader Urges Beer Bill Action

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(INS)—Modification of the Volstead act to legalize beer at the December session of Congress was urged today by Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, Democratic House whip, and aide to National Chair-

ROOSEVELT ILL WITH COLD

By RAMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Suffering from a slight cold, and still "tired out" from his strenuous campaign, President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt remained in bed at the executive mansion today.

At the insistence of Mrs. Roosevelt, he cancelled his plans for going to their Hyde Park home this afternoon. It was announced at the mansion, however, that Mr. Roosevelt would leave for Hyde Park tomorrow "if he felt better."

Mrs. Roosevelt said there was nothing to be alarmed about. She said:

"The Governor has a slight cold and I insisted that he remain in bed today. He is still very tired and a day's rest in bed is just what he needs."

The President-elect is believed to have taken cold last Monday when he toured the Hudson Valley in a drizzling rain. He rode all afternoon in an open car, constantly waving his hat to his old friends and neighbors who cheered him.

Balbo Air 'Parade' To U.S. Announced

ROME, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Gen. Italo Balbo's long-planned mass flight of 20 military airplanes from Rome to Chicago and return for the 1933 Chicago exposition, was officially announced today by the Italian government.

The flight will start in June and will take probably two months by easy stages. Gen. Balbo, Italy's young air minister, will lead the flight, as he did one to South America more than a year ago.

'Words Are Good When Backed by Deeds, and Only So'—Theodore Roosevelt

MR. HOOVER on the night of the election sent the following telegram to Mr. Roosevelt:

"I congratulate you on the opportunity that has come to you to be of service to the country and I wish for you a most successful administration. In the common purpose of all of us I shall dedicate myself to every possible helpful effort.

"HERBERT HOOVER."

Mr. Hoover's message of congratulation to Mr. Roosevelt is an admirable utterance and expresses a fine and undoubtedly sincere sentiment.

Mr. Hoover shows a better side of his character in defeat than he did in the height of his success. The arrogance, obstinacy and perversity which distinguished Mr. Hoover when he believed himself the master of the situation, have been replaced by a tolerance and an apparent willingness to learn from events and to comply with the expressed will of the people.

However, the people must judge Mr. Hoover by his actions in the remaining months of his administration rather than by his professions in a polite message of congratulation to the president-elect.

If Mr. Hoover really desires to co-operate with incoming president, if he really is willing to learn from the clearly expressed verdict of the public, he will proceed to take more account of public opinion and to give more consideration to the expressions of the public will.

HE MUST ABANDON the idea that the "crowd has no mind of its own" and that "popular desires are no criteria to the real need."

In this country, with its enlightened electorate, where the average good citizen is entirely the equal of any public official, even of the President, in intelligence and knowledge of public affairs and in patriotic devotion to the welfare of the nation, the "crowd" HAS a mind of its own and popular desires are very DEFINITE criteria to the public need.

The will of the people is what controls the destiny of this nation.

The wisdom of the people is what guides the nation to success.

No public official, from the President down, can do more to make his administration of office a success than to consult with the people, listen to their sound and homely wisdom and endeavor to carry out their will.

Such a program leaves ample opportunity for the development of his own resourcefulness and the expression of his own judgment, so long as these conform to the general desires and objectives of the people who are his employers and his masters.

THE RECENT elections repudiated SOMETHING in the most emphatic manner in which it was possible for the electorate to express its condemnation.

If that positive repudiation is not of Mr. Hoover himself, then it certainly is of his policies, and Mr. Hoover if he has changed his mind somewhat and now desires to comply with the will of the public and to appreciate the fact that popular desires ARE criteria to the public need, will not insist in the remaining four months of his term, on urging upon the Congress and endeavoring to impose on the nation, the policies which have been so overwhelmingly repudiated.

If Mr. Hoover is wise and sincere, he will cease devoting his main attention to the difficulties of foreign nations and will exercise the power which the people of the United States have given him and employ the time for which the people of the United States are paying him, IN LOOKING AFTER THE INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY.

We have difficulties, too. We appreciate Mr. Hoover's kind heart and sympathetic nature, but let him employ his mind and his heart for OUR

CHIEF BADLY HURT, GIRL KICKED

Near-Panic Ensues as Steed Runs Wild on Parade Route

Assistant Supt. of Police Benjamin R. Marshall, leading the Armistice Day parade, was injured seriously when thrown from his horse near the reviewing stand, Ridge avenue. A child also was hurt by the kicking animal, and a near panic followed among spectators as the riderless horse dashed two blocks through the parade lines.

INJURIES SERIOUS

Marshall was taken to Presbyterian Hospital and then rushed to Mercy Hospital for special treatment of a concussion of the brain and probable fracture of the lower vertebrae. Police Surgeon Daniel E. Sable was summoned to his bedside by radio.

Mary Shiring, 10, of 2439 Snyder street, North Side, was injured when Marshall's horse backed into the crowd as the rider fought to control it. The flying hoofs struck the girl in the knee and thigh and she was treated for contusions at Presbyterian Hospital.

Marshall, who is known as a splendid rider, had trouble in controlling his horse, a spirited black charger. As he reined to one side, to allow the parade to pass near the reviewing stand, he had difficulty in holding the animal.

GALLOPS RIDERLESS

As the first band passed the horse shied into the crowd, then leaped out of control across the street, throwing Marshall to the pavement and scattering the band in every direction. The parade stopped while the riderless horse galloped along the line of march, pursued by mounted police. A broken stirrup dangled at the horse's side.

HISTORIC HOTEL RAZED BY FIRE

Frankford Springs Hotel, a Beaver County landmark, was destroyed by fire this morning.

The two-story frame structure, which housed famous generals in Revolutionary days and later famous for its mineral spring, could not be saved despite a bucket brigade organized by a road gang, working a half mile away. A baby buggy and a few pieces of wearing apparel were the only things which were saved.

The hotel, on Route No. 18, a connecting link between the Lincoln and the William Penn highways, was owned by R. A. McCracken. Some of its rooms were occupied by McCracken, his wife and two children, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Silverton. The women and the children escaped uninjured. The two men were out at the time.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning in St. Raphael's Catholic Shurch, Morningside, and burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Veterans Snub Hurley At Grave of Unknown

2 Legion Posts Hold Own Service, Honor B. E. F. Martyrs

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, Va., Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Rival dedicatory exercises were held today at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier as a result of bitter feeling among ex-service men over eviction of the bonus marchers from Washington last July by federal troops.

IGNORE HURLEY

Members of these two posts, more than 100 of whom were in uniform, waited on the grassy slopes of the national cemetery until Secretary Hurley had laid a wreath at the Unknown Soldier's tomb. When he and Louis A. Johnson, National Commander of the American Legion, entered the nearby amphitheater to deliver their speeches, the procession of the two legion posts approached the shrine.

Officials of the two posts and several leaders of the B. E. F. placed wreaths on the tomb. Then their followers marched in formation to the graves of William Hushka and Eric Carlson, the two bonus marchers slain by police during the rioting on Pennsylvania

WAR LEGIONS PAY HONOR TO DEAD

Parading Heroes Halt In Silent Tribute to Fallen Comrades

Swinging with martial stride, scarcely slower than in their soldier days, thousands of World War veterans marched today in commemoration of the close of the great conflict 14 years ago.

As the tramp of the olive drab host resounded through the skyscraper canyon downtown, cheers and applause came from the throng of spectators, while from the windows above floated showers of ticker tape and confetti.

Contrasted with the weather-beaten service uniform were the brilliantly-hued garb of American Legion drum and bugle corps and the war nurses wearing white.

In automobiles came disabled veterans, the silver-haired survivors of the Civil War, and the Gold Star Mothers.

At 11 o'clock the marching thousands halted and stood at attention for one minute, in tribute to their comrades who fell on the battlefields of France. From Monument Hill, North Side, there boomed a 21-gun salute.

WAR LEADERS HERE

Beginning at Fifth avenue and Pride street, the parade moved down Fifth avenue, across the Sixth Street Bridge to Stockton avenue and past a reviewing stand in Ridge avenue.

Among the distinguished guests in the reviewing stand were Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, the 80th Division's wartime commander; Gen. E. C. Shannon, former commander of the 111th Infantry and Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania, and John L. Bingham, president of the Federation of War Veterans' Societies.

A group of widows from the Ladies G. A. R. Home, Hawkins Station, today witnessed their first Armistice parade. Transportation was provided by the Community Service Association, organizers of the citizens' co-operative bus service, which donated a bus to

DUKES BATTLE S. DAKOTA

FORBES FIELD, Nov. 11.—A small Armistice Day crowd turned out for Duquesne University's football game with South Dakota State here this afternoon. The weather was chilly and the sky overcast presenting a bleak setting for the engagement.

The kickoff was scheduled for 2:30 but the visiting squad was late arriving on the field, and the officials hastened to get the contest under way.

STIMSON GETS NOTE FROM BRITAIN

Contents Telegraphed To Hoover in California

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Fourteen years after the Armistice that ended the world's greatest war, the United States today was faced with the prospects of virtual repudiation of the foreign debt agreements under which this country was to have received in principal and interest more than $22,000,000,000.

Secretary of State Stimson today officially admitted that he had received a note from the British government regarding the British debt payment to the United States, but declined to discuss its nature.

NOTE DELIVERED

The note was delivered to Stimson yesterday by the British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, on specific instruction from the British foreign office. It was believed to have dealt specifically with the debt payment due December 15 and more generally with the future installments.

The contents were immediately telegraphed to President Hoover at Palo Alto, Cal., and the Treasury Department was also informed of the conference. No action was expected to be taken pending Mr. Hoover's return to Washington.

Stimson said the text of the note probably would be made public within a few days, or as soon as the State Department obtained the consent of the British government to its publication.

He declined to say whether the contents of the note had been telegraphed to President-elect Roosevelt.

EXPECT ADVANCES

So far the British government is the only one of the major European debtors which has approached the United States since the election on Tuesday with regard to the debts.

Although similar advances are anticipated from the French and Italian envoys, and probably from some of the others, Stimson said he had not received any notes from them or verbal communication.

Greece has defaulted on her installment due yesterday, and the Hungarian government has given notice to the Treasury Department that it cannot pay its installment due on December 15.

France Sounds Out U. S. On Interest Payment

PARIS, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—In a semi-official quarter it was said today that "quite probably" France has sounded out the American government regarding war debt negotiations, particularly with a view to suspension of a $20,000,000 interest payment due December 15.

This step, it was said, is justified by the fact that the Lausanne conference France agreed to the American proposals and, somewhat in consequence of the Hoover moratorium, accepted an appreciable reduction of her reparations claims against Germany.

ADDRESS VETERANS

Meanwhile, Hurley and Johnson were addressing a capacity crowd in the amphitheater. Hurley was escorted by a military guard and his arrival at the amphitheater was signaled by the booming of cannon at nearby Fort Myer.

But when the War Secretary started to speak, about 150 ex-service men arose in protest and walked out. They quietly marched to the exits, some accompanied by women and children, without greatly disturbing Hurley's remarks.

A warning against American participation in "useless wars which settle nothing," was voiced by Legion Commander Johnson, who presided. Johnson made a spirited plea for adequate national defense as a preparation against war.

Irene McLaughlin's Kennels Not Hobby

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—A county judge ruled today Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin's dog shelter was a charitable enterprise and not "a rich woman's hobby."

The decision, made by County Judge Perry L. Parsons, freed Mrs. McLaughlin from payment of $150 a year taxes on the shelter, "Orphans of the Storm," where from 100 to 400 dogs are cared for.

Farmer Seeks Beer From Postoffice

TONKAWA, Okla., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Uncle Sam isn't dispensing beer with postage stamps, an Oklahoma farmer, jug in hand, was informed at the Tonkawa postoffice. He told Assistant Postmaster Trekell:

"Why, they said we could get beer at the postoffice as soon as Roosevelt was elected."

man James A. Farley during the campaign.

McDuffie said that balancing of the budget with the aid of a tax on beer might relieve President-elect Roosevelt of the necessity of calling a special session after March 4.

McDuffie said:

"The first thing for Congress to do is to modify the Volstead act for economic reasons and turn the money from the speakeasies into the Treasury. The people have spoken in no uncertain terms and there can be no mistake as to their wishes."

SEES SUPPORT

He expressed belief that most Southern Democrats would support the platform both "in letter and in spirit." He added that many sincere drys in the South now believe that national prohibition is a failure.

The impending battle over beer today overshadowed all other preparations for the December session of the "lame duck" Congress.

Every indication pointed to the passage of a measure modifying the Volstead act, although dry leaders said they can stop the movement.

A survey of the "lame duck" Congress by International News Service showed there will be enough votes both in Senate and House for a beer bill unless Democrats who have been dry in the past refuse to accept the platform declaration.

The implied threat of drys to filibuster against a beer bill stirred the wets into a ferment of excitement. They accepted the declaration of Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, that a beer bill cannot pass in the short session as notice that filibustering tactics will be used.

They declared that any such movement would amount to a repudiation of the will of the people as expressed at the polls on Tuesday.

BORAH ANSWERED

Answering Borah's prediction that the short session will neither legalize beer nor submit repeal, Rufus S. Lusk, national legislative officer of the Crusaders, said:

"A 4-year-old boy can understand that the election was a plain and forceful mandate to Congress that at least three-fourths of the people want prohibition ended. They want it ended at once.

"Any effort of 'lame duck' congressmen to fight a beer bill and a repeal resolution is thwarting the will of the country. Everybody knows that the new Congress will pass a beer bill and a repeal resolution. If it be all right to do that next May, why not before Christmas?"

F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, denied that the election showed the country wet. He said it was a Democratic victory on economic grounds.

The Anti-Saloon League chieftain served notice that the drys will fight all wet congressmen in the election two years hence. He said:

"As for the enthusiastic predictions of immediate beer and prompt repeal, the wets have a long and hard road to travel. The result of the congressional elections will not be determined until the returns are all in, until a definite bill has been presented, and until the roll has been called in both House and Senate."

Labor's modification committee, Woll said, is now preparing a beer bill to be presented on December 5, when Congress convenes.

KAHN SETTLES DIAV'S SUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—The $500,000 breach of contract suit of Mme. Lydia Lindgren against Otto H. Kahn was discontinued today after a four-hour conference between counsel for both sides.

This was announced by Max D. Steuer, Kahn's lawyer, who refused to give any details of the settlement. Steuer said:

"You'll have to see the Swedish nightingale herself. She'll probably regain her voice now."

Asked if any injunction had been obtained to restrain the diva from future suits against her millionaire former protector, Steuer grinned:

"You can imagine what will happen if she starts anything again."

Then Samuel Meyers, attorney for the woman whose career Kahn backed to the tune of $300,000, declared "everything has been disposed of in a friendly way."

Election Won't Curb Liquor Enforcement

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition administrator, told newspapermen today that, as far as election effects are concerned, the enforcement unit of the government "will carry on as usual."

Appropriations for the work were made by the last Congress for the fiscal year ending next July, and he said the prohibition work will continue on that basis.

WORLD PAUSES IN TRIBUTE TO HEROIC DEAD

Memory of Warriors Honored in All of Allied Nations

Associated Press.

The unforgotten dead received their tribute of silence as the world paused in its work today, remembering the armistice which ended the World War 14 years ago.

In every nation which shared the victory men rose with bared heads and women's hands fell idle. Machines stopped at 11 a. m., and for two minutes there was silence.

In Washington America renewed its homage to the unknown soldier. In London the King laid a wreath at the monument to England's dead. In Paris, in far-off Australia, in Japan and China, in South America, in every country from which men went to fight with the Allies, there were brief and solemn ceremonies.

Here and there disturbances arose. In Scotland the unemployed created a disturbance and there was a similar incident at Vincennes.

Reds Clamor as Wales Honors World War Dead

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Minor unemployment demonstrations today marred Britain's traditionally solemn observance of Armistice Day.

Disorders occurred in various parts of London when individuals failed to observe the two-minute period of silence. Shocked by this unprecedented disrepect to the war dead, indignant crowds set upon the dissenters and beat them severely.

Commemorating the hour and day the guns signalled "cease firing" on all fronts, King George V, in the name of the British Empire and in the presence of massed thousands, placed a flaming wreath of red Flanders poppies at the base of the Cenotaph, the nation's unified war memorial here.

The Queen and other women members of the royal family watched from the Home Department balcony.

In Edinburgh, a group of Communists attempted to stage a noisy protest on the stroke of 11 as the Prince of Wales stood with bared head.

HOOVER RUSHES BACK TONIGHT

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 11.—(INS.)—His home stay cut short by vital problems affecting the world economic situation, President Hoover today prepared to leave California tonight on a fast special train that will get him to Washington Wednesday morning for conferences with his cabinet.

Primarily, it was understood, the question of international debt payments was causing the executive to reduce his brief vacation in Palo Alto by 24 hours. Reports have reached him that Europe's leading natons—now that the national elections have passed—are ready to ask for an extension of the moratorium.

The next installments on the World War debt are due December 15. None of the major powers included any provision for meeting them in current budgets. By tacit consent, this highly delicate matter was left unopened pending the American people's choice last Tuesday between President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt.

AIR CRASH KILLS 5; 2 CHILDREN

KEMPVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Flying far off its course and apparently lost in a storm, a plane en route from Chicago to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., crashed in a woods on a steep hillside near here last night, carrying its five occupants to their deaths.

The dead: Joseph F. Hirt, 40, president of the Forest Products Engineering Company, Chicago; his wife, Inez, 38; Mrs. Elizabeth Hunter, 38, Henry, Ill., and her two children, Robert, 4, and Inez, 2. All were killed instantly except the baby girl, who died of a brain concussion several hours after the accident.

The Hirts and Mrs. Hunter were friends of long standing. They were en route to Fort Lauderdale to spend the winter on the Hirt farm.

China Tightens Up On Plane Imports

SHANGHAI.—The Nanking government has decided to tighten regulations regarding the importation of airplane and accessories. Both Chinese and foreign importers are warned that application must be made to the Ministry of War specifying the make, quantity, firm of origin, use to which the planes or parts are to be put and much other data. If approved, the applicant will be granted an import license. Materials brought into China in violation of these regulations will be subject to confiscation at the port of landing.

Famed Soprano Here With Husband for Concert Tonight

The Baron and Baroness von Popper (the Baroness is Maria Jeritza) are not contemplating divorce, nor are they separated.

This is the answer of the Metropolitan Opera prima donna and her husband to published rumors that they were "on the verge."

The famed singer is in Pittsburgh for a concert at the Syria Mosque tonight; her husband is traveling with her. When interviewed in their suite at the Schenley Hotel last night they denied any thought of separation.

Mme. Jeritza told of her concert in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York on election night, accompanied by an orchestra of 200 musicians. She said:

"I had to fight against 200 men. I felt as if I were in a football game."

And speaking of football, she added:

"The last time I was in Pittsburgh I went to a football game. I yelled so loud that my manager became excited and said I was endangering my voice, but I had a good time."

The prima donna added that she intends to make her first American motion picture in April.

OSCEOLA, Mo., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—The Johnson-Lucas Banking Company was robbed of between $5,000 and $6,000 by a masked man who forced T. H. Whitaker, vice president, to accompany him to the bank at 3 a. m. today and open the vault.

G. O. P. LEADERS TURN TO REED AND MILLS

Senator Mentioned As Prospect for 1936 Nomination

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—With smoke still hanging over the political battlefield of 1932, Republican leaders today had mapped an aggressive campaign to win back Republican voters who switched their allegiance Tuesday, and to reorganize their own party.

In formal discussions of who will lead the party during the next four years, Senator David Aiken Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills were prominently mentioned by those connected with the Hoover-Curtis ballot-drive.

'CAMPAIGN BEGUN'

Both are considered 1936 presidential possibilities.

One leader high in administration circles said:

"Reed's campaign for the presidency began yesterday."

Reed is expected to be one of the dominant Republicans among the 36 in the next Senate. He has two more years to serve, and party leaders expressed confidence he will be re-elected.

His state was among the seven which remained in the Republican column, and at eastern headquarters much credit for that showing is given to the Senator.

Mills, who will leave administration circles next March, is represented by some of his friends as having definite presidential aspirations.

G. O. P. SPOKESMAN

He was, before and during the campaign, one of the President's most ardent champions and was frequently referred to as "the administration spokesman."

In the discussions of who will lead the party in the next Congress, the name of James Wolcott Wadsworth, Jr., is frequently mentioned.

After serving in the Senate for two terms, the New Yorker was elected Tuesday to the House and is expected to take an aggressive part in the minority leadership.

needs and expend his sympathies on OUR difficulties.

THE QUESTION of moratoriums and foreign debt payments will be among the first to present themselves to the consideration of the administration after this election.

In fact, the foreign nations, which shrewdly waited until after the election before agitating their demands, are now beginning to uncover their plans for postponement and cancellation of foreign debts.

If Mr. Hoover has learned anything from this election he should stand firm on the often-expressed determination of the American people to make no further concessions to foreign debtors.

Half the foreign debt has already been cancelled. THE OTHER HALF MUST BE PAID.

It is to be hoped, too, that Mr. Hoover's administration has made no commitments through the President or through his secretaries or through the administration's agents abroad which will involve this country in foreign complications and foreign entanglements and precipitate us into foreign wars.

IT HAS BEEN STATED in the press dispatches that the administration has received with favor France's proposal of a security pact.

That is a plan by which the United States will guarantee the security of France.

The people of this country have nothing but the friendliest feeling toward the people of France, and in fact, toward the people of all other foreign nations, but these foreign nations must attend to their own "security," and the best way for them to maintain that security is to stop preparations and provocations which invite war.

The people of the United States do not want to take part in any further foreign conflicts. Our people will make every effort to promote peace through good example and good offices, but they will not participate in foreign wars, nor guarantee the security of any scheming, hating, warring foreign nations.

The correction of Mr. Hoover's foreign policies, so wholly at variance with the will and wisdom of the American people, will do much to rehabilitate him in the opinion of the people.

THE CHIEF CHANGE necessary in his domestic policy is the realization that the depression cannot be dispelled by using government funds MERELY TO FINANCE THE FINANCIERS and an appreciation of the fact that to bring back prosperity, THE WELFARE OF THE MASSES must be primarily considered and the PURCHASING POWER OF THE COMMUNITY INCREASED.

If Mr. Hoover will NOW allow the Democratic Congress to pass a bill for a prosperity loan, and so secure government funds to give work to the unemployed, to sustain the American standard of wages, to increase the purchasing power of the masses and so stimulate purchases in the shops, orders of manufactured goods from the factories and the consumption of raw materials from the farms and the mines, he will see the whole nation begin to throb with renewed vigor and will have the satisfaction of noting a distinct revival in prosperity even before he leaves office.

Nor in making the prosperity loan, need Mr. Hoover any longer be afraid of the banker's bogie of inflation.

A little REFLATION of the circulating medium—banknote currency plus bank deposit currency—to what it was in times of prosperity would be extremely good for the country.

In fact, this judicious REFLATION would in itself do much to revive prosperity.

Finally, in adopting these popular policies, Mr. Hoover will be complying with the spirit of his dispatch to his successful rival, and not only co-operating with the President- and Vice President-elect, but accepting commendably the verdict of the people and duly and wisely conforming to the people's will.

JIMMY WALKER SAILS FOR POLITICAL 'EXILE' IN PARIS

HOME IN EUROPE LIKELY, SAY FRIENDS

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Convinced he is "politically dead" and life in New York no longer having any allure for him, former Mayor James J. Walker is on the high seas today, bound for sunny Italy, with a trip to India in the offing and the likelihood that he will end up by establishing a residence in Paris for an indefinite period.

Thus, rather poignantly, comes to an end the brilliant political career of the dapper, wise-cracking "Jimmy" Walker — a career which stretched back over 23 years and put him into intimate touch with some of the most famous public figures in American life. He was a man who "had everything," brains, ability and showmanship but with one serious drawback—the love of a good time.

DEPARTURE SECRET

Walker, accompanied by his valet, Greenhouse, sailed last evening on the liner Conte Grande bound for Mediterranean ports. He made every effort to keep his departure a secret. He went aboard the ship hours before it left, locked himself in a stateroom and refused to see newspaper men who had learned of his contemplated departure. Two husky detectives guarded the stateroom.

His departure was different from his other European jaunts. There was no band at the pier, no throng of admiring friends. Just "the forgotten man" of New York politics, slipping away into a self-exile as unobtrusively as he could.

"The man with a million friends" before he dropped from the glamour of international spotlight to obscurity in a few short weeks, Walker had been heartsick since his return from Europe exactly a month ago. Since then, he had been in deep seclusion, passing up even his old friends.

HOPED FOR VINDICATION

They said he was "eating his heart out" because Tammany had not nominated him for Mayor at the city convention so he could run on a "vindication platform" and recover prestige lost as a result of the revelations of the Seabury inquiry.

"Jimmy" was on the high seas when Tammany nominated the serious-minded John P. O'Brien as its mayoralty candidate. Had Walker been home, he might have stampeded the convention, his friends say.

Walker made only one public appearance in New York City in the past month. That was last Tuesday when he went to his polling place to vote. He was accompanied by two detectives.

MAY WORK IN PARIS

From India, he will go to Paris, a city "Jimmy" has always liked and where he has many friends. The fact that he has many friends in the theatrical business strengthened the belief that he will accept the position to act as foreign representative of an American film concern.

Sailing on the same ship with Walker last evening was Betty Compton, the former Broadway musical comedy star. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Florence Compton, and a maid. Miss Compton also attempted to keep her departure a secret.

SEER FORETOLD OWN DEATH

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Evangeline Adams, noted astrologer, is dead—and her followers are sorrowful, but very proud.

They say that Miss Adams, who went through a long life wresting predictions and fortune from the stars, was accurate to the end—that she predicted her own death.

George E. Jordan, Jr., her husband, whom she married after a horoscope romance, declared after her death at the age of 60 late yesterday, that she had foreseen her fate.

She was, he said, "in a period of adverse aspects and conditions over which she had to use the most extreme diplomacy to avoid the result which she hoped to avoid."

This result, he explained, was heart disease. A heart attack seized her Saturday, leading to her death.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Harvey Hall, 70-year-old sewing machine repair man, who recently bombed the Logan & Bryan brokerage offices here, was found insane and ordered committed to the state asylum at Patton yesterday in Superior Court.

Hall testified at his hearing on a charge of malicious use of dynamite that he believed "stock gambling" was the cause of the depression.

INSULL 73, GETS FELICITATIONS

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—More than 50 cablegrams and radiograms from all over the world arrived here today congratulating Samuel Insull on his seventy-third birthday.

The white-haired utilities magnate, formally detained pending extradition proceedings to the United States, was in good spirits, but he lamented his present situation.

The two Chicago officials en route here with extradition papers are due in Naples, Italy, tomorrow, and should arrive here about Monday.

The American Legation today stressed the fact the Chicagoans had no authority to act when they reach here, and that consular officials will handle everything.

PROBE BOMBING OF NEWSPAPER

LORAIN, O., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—A mysterious attempt to bomb the plant of the Lorain Journal, afternoon newspaper, was under investigation today.

Four sticks of dynamite, one with a fuse attached, were found in a small leather bag, last night, in a doorway of the Journal building.

The Lorain Journal is owned by the same company as the Mansfield Journal, which was bombed with serious damage in 1931. The Mansfield paper, at that time, was in the midst of an editorial crusade against crime. However, no such crusade has been in progress here.

BOMB DAMAGES AKRON THEATER

AKRON, O., Nov. 11.—(INS.)—An explosion police said was caused by a bomb hurled from a speeding automobile, today wrecked the lobby entrance of the Palace Theater here rocking the entire downtown section.

The blast was attributed to a labor dispute by police, who said it apparently was a revival of a series of bombings occurring at local theaters in the past several years.

No one was believed injured by the explosion, although scores of guests at nearby hotels were awakened by the report.

DEATH-RAVISHED CUBA BEGINS RELIEF WORK

Storm Toll Estimated In Hundreds, Town Wiped Out by Wave

By CLIFFORD GALLOWAY
International News Service.

HAVANA, Nov. 11.—With an estimated death toll ranging between 500 and 1,200, the swampy south-central reaches of Cuba lay ravaged today as relief forces were mobilized to care for the thousands left homeless by the hurricane which swept up from the Caribbean on Wednesday.

The hurricane struck in the vicinity of Santa Cruz del Sur, a fishing town on the southern coast, sweeping up the seas and deluging the town beneath a 25-foot wall of water. From there, the storm streaked across the island, devastating town and countryside, with its full force felt as far as Nuevitas on the northern coast.

STORY OF VIC

From the frenzied, panicky tales of survivors and the laconic reports of local officials, the ministry of communications attempted to piece together a full story of the disaster and an authentic tally of the casualties.

The death figures varied widely. The ministry of communications placed the known dead at 300 and 400 missing in the town of Santa Cruz del Sur alone.

This figure, however, was small in comparison with other estimates. Lieut. Col. Dilato, who visited the town, returned to Camaguay with an estimate of between 800 and 1,000 dead. The Havana newspaper Heraldo de Cuba placed the fatalities at 1,500.

Santa Cruz del Sur had a floating population, believed to be in the neighborhood of 3,000 persons.

TOWN WIPED OUT

In the space of a few minutes the town had ceased to exist. A tidal wave, levelling all before it mounted the beach, swept into the town and spread with boiling fury five miles inland.

Only four structures resisted the force of the water that swelled in under the pressure of a 150-mile an hour wind and transformed the countryside into a swirling lake 252 feet deep.

Hundreds of persons were drowned in that first terrific onrush of water. Hundreds of others, who had managed to survive the first sweep by clinging to trees or floating wreckage, were snatched away and hurled to watery graves when the giant wave receded.

Other towns and villages and even cities as large as Camaguey suffered loss of life. Camaguey reported between 47 and 50 dead. Numerous villages added to the ghastly list with tolls ranging from one or two to a score or more.

CROPS DESTROYED

The rich, fertile plantations of Central Cuba were left ravaged. Tobacco fields were uprooted as if by giant plows. Banana plantations were left level, with thousands of green-fruited trees laid as low as if some mammoth steam-roller had trundled over them.

Military aviators, flying over the ravaged countryside, returned to their bases with stories of destruction and appeals for immediate aid.

In the wake of the storm came poignant tales of tragedy and heroism. Scarcely one family in the town of Santa Cruz escaped bereavement. Fathers saw their wives and families torn from them and then turned to risk their own lives to save strangers from the fury of the storm.

NEW FIRST LADY OFTEN VISITED WHITE HOUSE

(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The White House will not be a new story for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

She was his favorite niece.

HAS UNCLE'S ENERGY

She has the boundless energy of her famous uncle, the quick interest in world affairs, the progressive attitude toward government and social conditions which marked him among the nation's great presidents.

She has also the forceful personality which distinguished the victorious Theodore Roosevelt.

Eleanor Roosevelt did not change her name when she was married.

She was born October 11, 1884, the daughter of Elliot Roosevelt and Anna Hall Roosevelt. Her father was a brother of the late President Roosevelt.

All through her childhood the closest relations were maintained between the two families, and she played with the little Alice Roosevelt, "Princess Alice" of the White House days, now Mrs. Alice Longworth.

FEUD UNLIKELY

Of late years, the intimacy between Mrs. Longworth and Mrs. Roosevelt has waned, chiefly because of their opposing political camps.

Those who know Mrs. Longworth say her cherished ambition has been to see her brother, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., carry on his father's tradition in the presidency.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is only a distant cousin of the family of Theodore Roosevelt, as has been pointed out by Republican leaders so often during the recent campaign.

Washington's gossips already have begun to smack their lips over the possibility of another exciting "feud" in the capital, between the new first lady and her first cousin, Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

But the friends of Mrs. Roosevelt know that she will not allow a suggestion of strained feelings between herself and Mrs. Longworth to appear on the surface. She is far too wise and generous a soul for that.

And whatever thrusts there have been in the past have been from the other camp. Mrs. Roosevelt now laughs them off and charges them up to the demands of politics.

MET IN CHILDHOOD

Both of Eleanor Roosevelt's parents died when she was still a child, and she went to live with her grandmother, Mrs. Valentine Hall, in Tivoli, N. Y., not far from the Hyde Park home where the young Franklin D. Roosevelt was growing up.

The new first lady's first meeting with her future husband was at his Hyde Park home when he was 4 and she was 2.

The two children saw each other often when they were small children. They used to meet in the summer time at Henderson House in Henderson, N. Y., where all the children of the Roosevelt clan used to gather, with their families.

STUDIED IN ENGLAND

Eleanor Roosevelt was sent away to school in England when she was 16, and studied for several years at Madame Sylvest's school. In the summers she traveled with Madame Sylvest through Italy, Spain and France, returning to New York to take her place as a debutante.

She lived with her aunt, Mrs. Henry Parish in New York, and also spent some time with another aunt, Mrs. Douglas Robinson.

It was at the home of Mrs. Parish that she again met her distant cousin, Franklin D. Roosevelt, then just out of Harvard.

And it was there that she married him, March 17, 1905.

The wedding took place on St. Patrick's Day because it was the only day on which Eleanor's beloved uncle, President Theodore Roosevelt, could leave Washington.

And it was he who gave away the bride.

'Democrat Always,' Spurred War on Monopolies

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS

War Time Secretary of the Navy.

Written Expressly for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

As a young State Senator in 1912 he preferred Wilson to his own cousin, Theodore Roosevelt, because he believed in the creed of the New Freedom and believed Wilson would usher in a larger and better day. Asked when a member of the State Senate of New York if he admired Theodore Roosevelt, the young Senator replied naively:

"Why, who can help but admire him? I differ with him on a great many questions, but they are the differences between men who are both seeking to do their best for the public good. Only he is doing it in the Republican way, while I am trying to do it in a Democratic way."

And, he added:

"I am a Democrat first, last and all the time."

At that time the term Democrat did not seem to need an affix or suffix or a prefix, but the fact that he admired Theodore Roosevelt when T. R. was making war on the "malefactors of great wealth" and when he himself was to espouse the Wilson cause because Wilson to him embodied the leader who held that "only new principles of action will save us from a final hard crystallization of monopoly" showed the bent of his mind and his political course.

These things constitute pretty good proof that when he was a novice in public service he had already become a Progressive Democrat, a term later to have a distinct significance at the time there was debate as to whether the Democratic party would be a vital and fighting organization for the creed of Jefferson or would invoke his name while compromising with pink reaction.

Wars on Privilege

If Franklin D. Roosevelt was progressive as a young Senator and later as Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Wilson, his faith in Liberal Progressiveness has increased a thousand fold as he has grown in years and in knowledge of the slipping away of government from the principles which had earlier made him say:

"I am a Democrat first, last and all the time."

He has come in recent years, being compelled to wage war in almost single combat as Governor of New York with those seeking to exploit the public resources for private enrichment, to be more than a Liberal Progressive in creed.

He has become a militant Progressive in all that this term implies. He knows that Privilege has been in the saddle in these years since he left Washington when he was nominated for Vice President in 1920. He has seen it riding hard as Monopoly has taken the place both of Competition and Co-operation. He has been forced to wage combat with it in New York State. He asked no quarter and he gave none at Albany. His course at Washington will not be different.

Two Examples

If any citizen wishes to know what kind of a President the country will have in Franklin Roosevelt, the answer will be found in his record as Governor of New York and his expanding knowledge of the need for the application of like policies at Washington. Two records in his Gubernatorial career are illustrative of his practical philosophy. His acts as Chief Executive of the Empire State will foreshadow the country's policy after the fourth of March.

The main ones are:

1. The conflict in New York over who should develop and control the Long Sault Rapids in the international section of the St. Lawrence river, and whether when developed it should inure to the benefit of all the people or be exploited for the enrichment of the agencies seeking to make hydro-electric power a private monopoly in that state and in the country.

The power issue in its acute form seems to be new because the Muscle Shoals conflict in Washington has been emphasized of late. But it is not new to Governor Roosevelt. He had to meet it early when he was a member of the State Senate in New York. The potential value of the St. Lawrence river power was little known or regarded when a Republican legislature and Governor of New York parted with that great natural resource prior to Roosevelt's entrance into the Senate of New York in 1911.

Guarded Rights

But, under the leadership of the present United States Senator Wagner in the State Senate and ex-Gov. Al Smith in the House, the Democratic Legislature of 1911 passed an act revoking the charter which had been given to Andrew Mellon's Aluminum Company of America to do with the water power of the St. Lawrence what such companies have done with like powers—convert the water into gold for their own benefit and behoof. The legislators sensed the coming importance of hydro-electricity.

When Gov. Roosevelt went to Washington to become Assistant Secretary of the Navy, it was not long before President Wilson and the Navy Department found that if the naval petroleum reserves were to be kept from sequestration by oil squatters they must fight.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT . . RESEMBLED, SUPPORTED WILSON

It was a battle royal for seven years, in which Roosevelt played the part of a man, before victory was won. Not only did the Navy secure full title to the oil reserves in California, but in addition, President Wilson set aside, in Wyoming, Teapot Dome as a reserve for the exclusive use of the Navy.

Roosevelt was a watch-dog, particularly in the closing days of one Congress, sitting up all night in the House of Representatives when there was danger that a last minute measure might open the Naval Reserves for leasing.

These two experiences, one in Albany and one in Washington, were instructive. Their lessons were to be drawn upon when Roosevelt later battled with those who wanted to grab the power of the St. Lawrence.

In his speech on power at Portland, Ore., Gov. Roosevelt said that the people has been misinformed because of "a systematic subtle, deliberate and unprincipled campaign of misinformation, of propaganda, and I may use the words, of lies and falsehood." He pointed out that power companies had been over-capitalized to the extent of $520,000,000 so that the people had to pay "unjust profits through higher rates." At another place he committed himself to governmental completion of Muscle Shoals, Boulder Dam and the Columbia River and St. Lawrence projects.

Eight Remedies

Governor Roosevelt has made very plain his position and the policy that will govern him with relation to Power in these eight remedies:

1—Full publicity as to all capital issues of stocks, bonds and other securities, liabilities and indebtedness, and capital investment, and frequent information as to gross and net earnings.

2—Publicity on stock ownership of stocks and bonds and other securities, including the stock and other interest of all officers and directors.

3—Publicity with respect to all inter-company contracts and services and interchange of power.

4—Regulation and control of holding companies by Federal Power Commission and the same publicity with regard to such holding companies as provided for the operating companies.

5—Co-operation of the Federal Power Commission with public utilities commissions of the several states, obtaining information and data pertaining to the regulation and control of such public utilities.

6—Regulation and control of the issue of stocks and bonds and other securities on the principle of prudent investment only.

7—Abolishing by law the reproduction cost theory for rate-making and establishing in place of it the actual money, prudent-investment principle as the basis for rate-making.

8—Legislation making it a crime to publish or circulate false or deceptive matter relating to public utilities.

Backed New Rule

The other policy adopted during his service as Governor, which foreshadows what may be expected of the new administration, was a broadening of the application of the Cleveland doctrine that "public office is a public trust."

Gov. Roosevelt laid down a new and sound rule with reference to the standards for men in public office.

When the sheriff of New York was under investigation and Gov. Roosevelt had to consider the evidence and the findings of the Seabury Committee, there arose a question which called for a Solomonic ruling. Judge Seabury uncovered the fact that the Sheriff had deposited very many thousands of dollars in various banks, sums far in excess of his salary, and the allegation was that these large sums came to him because as sheriff the donor or donors either received or expected to receive some official favor or be granted some immunity.

The counsel for the sheriff contended that, if he conducted the duties of his office satisfactorily, it was not the concern of the state how much money he had in the banks or from what sources it had been derived.

Set Aside Plea

They went further and said any inquiry was entering the domain of a man's private affairs, as much so as if his home was unlawfully entered. That contention was supported by precedent and argument. A legalistic Governor might have listened to such technical pleas. Instead, Gov. Roosevelt laid down this rule, as four square as it was new:

"As a matter of general sound public policy, I am very certain that there is a requirement that where a public official is under inquiry or investigation, especially an elective official, and it appears that his scale of living or the total of his bank deposits far exceed the public salary which he is known to receive, he, the elected public official, owes a positive public duty to the community to give a reasonable or credible explanation of the sources of the deposits or the sources which enabled him to mainain a scale of living beyond the amount of his salary."

The sheriff was unable to show how the large sums had come into his hands, his statements involved him in a maze of inconsistencies, and, under his rule cited above, Gov. Roose-removed him from office. When that rule was promulgated and enforced other officials under like charges, who could or would not tell where or from whom or for what purpose their bank accounts were swollen, resigned.

If there are any officials under the federal government, who on the side have been getting rich while serving Uncle Sam, they will not welcome a President who formulated and put the rule in operation which would send them to join Fall or other unworthy officials, or be retired from public service for the public good.

Imhoff Election Big Ohio Upset

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov. 11.—Eastern Ohio's biggest election upset came in the announcement today by the Belmont County election board that Lawrence E. Imhoff, Belmont County Probate Judge, had been elected a Democratic member of Congress over Frank Murphy, of Steubenville, Republican incumbent. Imhoff received 57,284 votes to 56,046 for Murphy.

Pittsburgh's Firm Bid on Bridge Low

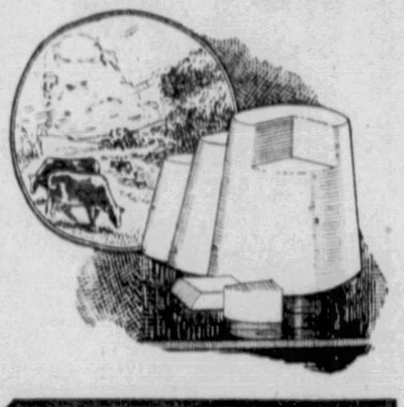
HARRISBURG, Nov. 11. The Welsh Construction Company, of Pittsburgh, was low bidder for the construction of a bridge on Route 111 in Greene County, with a bid of $12,245. Albert H. Ferguson, of McKeesport, with a bid of $41,815, was low on the construction of 1.3 miles of Route 288 in Allegheny County.

The Donahoe Label Protects Your Table

TASTE and FLAVOR Tell their Story of Quality

every time you buy Donahoe's Fresh Churned Creamery



BUTTER 2 lbs. for 53c

Donahoe's Butter is always of uniform high quality, because it is churned EVERY day from absolutely pure FRESH whole milk, separated that very day from that day's milking in the most sanitary creameries.

Ordinary creamery butter is made from cream separated by farmers and dairymen themselves, often in a makeshift manner. Sometimes this cream is kept on the farm for a week, until the cream can is filled, before it is shipped to the creamery. Naturally butter made from a mixture of fresh and old cream, cannot be of the same high quality as butter churned daily from fresh cream.

Naturally such high quality butter is worth more. The premium and extra bonus we pay on every pound of butter we buy commands the very highest quality. If you'll only try Donahoe's Butter, its Taste and its Flavor will tell you their story of quality.

LARGER SCHOOL UNITS URGED IN STATE

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 11.—The first step toward the larger and more economical local unit of school administration was taken yesterday at the annual education congress in the form of recommendations from a committee of the commission for the study of educational problems.

The local unit committee, headed by Dr. J. Linwood Eisenberg, president of the State Teachers' College at Slippery Rock, presented recommendations, the first of which is "to provide for the merging or annexation of school districts having less than 1,000 population, and to provide for appeal where such merging is found to be impossible." There are 1,150 such districts in Pennsylvania.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

All proposals presented today aimed at public school efficiency and equalization of opportunity for pupils of the rural districts. The recommendations will be further refined and presented as school code amendments and additions at the 1933 session of the Pennsylvania General Assembly.

Under the local unit committee's recommendations, provisions would be made to authorize county superintendents, in co-operation with district superintendents, and school boards involved, to proceed with the necessary surveys for the purpose of redistricting their counties into community school districts and to merge gradually over a period of years certain of the present local school districts into large community school districts, including the possible annexation of certain local districts to present third, second and first-class districts.

GROUPS TO HEAR PLAN EXPERTS

Members of 24 Pittsburgh organizations will join with visitors to the national conference on city planning in a civic dinner Tuesday night at Hotel Schenley, when "Community Life Fifty Years From Now" will be discussed.

Mr. Adams

Chief speakers will be Louis Brownlow, Chicago, and Thomas Adams, New York. Brownlow served under President Wilson as chairman of the governing body of Washington, D. C., thereafter as city manager in Petersburg, Va., and later in Knoxville, Tenn. He is now director of the Public Administration Clearing House of Chicago. Adams began city planning work when he was chosen to manage the first "garden city" in England. He is now general director of plans and surveys for the Regional Plan of New York, and research professor of city planning at Harvard.

Proud of Beard, Won't Shave for Roosevelt

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—William Martin, 88, who has shaved only four times since 1868, said he would break a precedent of 64 years' standing. He will not shave when President-elect Roosevelt is inaugurated.

Martin vowed 64 years ago he would shave only when Democratic Presidents are inaugurated. He has voted for 16 Democratic presidential candidates and shaved on the inauguration of Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson. He said:

"But I'm mighty proud of my whiskers and I want to be buried with them. I can't run the risk of not having a full beard at my death, so I won't shave when Roosevelt is inaugurated."

HELD IN THREAT TO CLERGYMAN

Thomas Kosky, 42, a Russian, was held for court under $500 bond by the United States commissioner at a hearing in which he was charged with sending through the mail an obscene letter to the Rev. H. Hunchar, pastor of the SS. Peter and Paul Greek Church, Sidney street.

The life of the clergyman was threatened in the letter, it was said. Kosky, a former member of the congregation, was arrested November 3 by postal inspectors.

Key and Another 24 Hours Given On Puzzler

You cipher fans were pretty silent yesterday, weren't you? And we haven't had many calls from you today, either.

Well, cipher No. 8 was a little different in method from those the Cipher Editor dished out in the past.

After this, though, don't be so quick to ask for harder ciphers, if you think this is tough.

So today we give you the key to Cipher No. 8 and another 24 hours in which to work it. It's still tough, in spite of the key, unless you strike the right method. The key is in the box with the cipher. And letter frequency won't do you a lot of good.

Max F. Thompson, of 5637 Darlington road, checks in as another member of the Cipher Fanners. We hope he had no ulterior motive in suggesting a club of cipher fans. John Kastler, Jr., of Aliquippa, writes a nice letter saying he figured out the "Sunset" cipher.

Saturday at 10:30 A. M.

The purpose of this unique lesson and demonstration is to interest boys and girls in golf as a sport and exercise, and to encourage them to begin a study of the game while young, with a view to the possibility of becoming future champions.

Mr. Parks, himself, won wide recognition at an early age as Captain of the University of Pittsburgh Golf Team, and a contender in the National Collegiate, Amateur, and Open Championship Tournaments. He had his first lesson, at the age of 12, from Gene Sarazen, present British and U. S. Open Champion.

Mr. Parks' complimentary lesson tomorrow will be interspersed with anecdotes of golf champions and demonstrations of various shots. All boys and girls, regardless of age, or whether or not they have ever played golf, are cordially welcome and urged to attend. Parents are invited to come along, if they wish.

Find New Ways to Direct the Eyes Upward

$16.75

That's a grand trick of costume design, making the eye travel upward. It not only makes the wearer appear taller, but it's also a means of getting attention for her Antoine wave, her peach-of-a-complexion and her bea-u-ti-ful eyes. And these frocks accomplish the trick with new, draped necklines, wide pleated sleeves, shirred trimmings, and brilliant cut-steel buttons running in a graduated row from waist to neckline.

Crinkled crepes are the fabrics, and they can be had in the glorious new reds, greens, blues and, of course, gray.

FILM DESCRIBES PRISON CAMP BRUTALITY

Hailed as an outstanding contribution to the fight against brutality and medievalism in prisons, prison farms and chain gangs of the United States, the movie "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang" continues at the Stanley Theater today, with Paul Muni in the leading role.

One comment on brutality and heartlessness in prison camps as shown in the picture today came from Frank L. Duggan, member of the board of trustees of the Western Penitentiary.

He said:

"Our prisons should reclaim men for society and I don't think chain gangs do that. Notable for its freedom from such torture is our 7,000-acre prison farm at Rockview.

"The chain gang is a very brutal way of treating any human. Those methods never accomplish anything.

"I think that, eventually, every prison in the United States will abolish such methods. One of the ways to bring the movement against them to a head, I am sure, is through such publicity as this."

"I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang" is the pictorialization of the autobiography of a convict who escaped from a southern chain gang.

It depicts in detail many of the brutal methods of punishment and restraint which are common practice in these camps—some of which were recently brought out in Florida, where a young New Jersey convict died from mistreatment.

Returning, shell shocked and nervous, from the war, Paul E. Burns disappeared from home. He was arrested for a criminal offense, sent to a chain gang, escaped.

In 1929, he was re-arrested in Chicago, where he had for seven years led a thoroughly respectable life, had become editor of a smart magazine, had an excellent reputation. Returned after extradition on the assurance he would be pardoned in 90 days, the pardon failed to materialize. He escaped again.

Burns' autobiography — from which the film was taken—appeared first in a detective magazine. It was subsequently published in book form. He himself helped in direction of the film, disappearing before the job was complete as he felt the hunt for him close in.

Light Bulbs Made by Japanese Costly to American Purchasers

M. A. FORST — R. J. WEESNER

Burn More Current Than Lamps Made In America

Pittsburghers, and Americans in general, are being badly fooled when they buy Japanese-made electric light bulbs at half the price of American-made bulbs, because it costs $1.10 more during the life of each 50-watt lamp to burn them than it does to use American lights.

This fact was established by tests just completed by H. E. Dyche, professor and head of the department of electrical engineering, University of Pittsburgh, following publication in the Sun-Telegraph that Japan is dumping 89,000,000 lamps on the American market this year.

Prof. Dyche's statement, given out after his tests were completed, was:

"If the American people were able to obtain Japanese lamps free of charge, it would cost them 90 cents more per 50-watt lamp to burn them than it would to use an American lamp for which purchase price is 20 cents."

Six 50-watt lamps of each make were purchased for the test. The final results showed, according to Prof. Dyche, that for the same amount of light the consumer's electric light bill would be 44 per cent higher when using the Japanese lamps.

Expressed in another way, the power consumption of the Japanese lamps is 1.63 watts per candle power, while that of the American-made lamp is but 1.13 watts per candle power. Prof. Dyche said:

"Based on the nominal life of 1,000 hours and an average rate of 5 cents per kilowatt hour, the energy consumed in the life of the American lamp costs $2.50, and since the Japanese lamp consumes 44 per cent more energy for the same light, its energy cost is $3.60, or $1.10 more than that of the American lamp."

GUARD POSTED OVER BALLOTS IMPOUNDED

Congressman-elect Henry Ellenbogen is taking no chances on his vote being tampered with during the official count. He has guards stationed in the Prothonotary's office, the tunnel between the City-County Building, the Sheriff's office and at the Returning Board room. Permission for his guards to change watch was granted to Ellenbogen yesterday when he appeared before the County Commissioners and asked for access to the Courthouse after nightfall.

The returning board appointed to make the official county tabulation of Tuesday's vote will resume work tomorrow, having adjourned yesterday after completing the count of the first three wards of Pittsburgh and part of the fourth.

GUARD ANNOUNCED

Judges William H. McNaugher and John P. Egan, conducting the count, announced the ballot boxes and records will be guarded, after Ellenbogen had conferred with them. He is the apparent victor in the Thirty-third Congressional District over the incumbent, Harry Estep.

No notice of contests had been filed with the judges up until adjournment yesterday.

TWO ROOMS USED

The hours of the members of the board will be from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. daily, except Saturday, when adjournment will be taken at 1 p. m.

The returning board is using two rooms to expedite the count, those of Judges Frank P. Patterson and Elder W. Marshall, of Common Pleas Court, situated on the eighth floor of the City-County Building.

It was said the court will detail one man to keep watch over the ballot boxes and records and the Republican and Democratic parties one each.

ART :: Washington 'Pageant' Pictured in Etchings

By PENELOPE REDD

Miss Redd

The Gillespie Gallery is exhibiting "The Bicentennial Pageant of George Washington." This lengthy title is conferred upon 20 etchings by as many different contemporary American artists selected for their special mission by John Taylor Arms, president of the Society of American Etchers.

The artists worked directly with an advisory council so that the subjects assigned to them would be illustrated accurately in the most minute historic detail. The committee sponsoring the effort endeavored to honor Washington "through a dramatic and accurate portrayal of interesting and important events in his illustrious life."

The events selected and the artists depicting them are: "Washington and His Mother," by Arthur W. Heintzelman; "Washington, the Surveyor's Assistant," by Robert Nisbet; "Washington on His Mission to the Ohio," by Sears Gallagher; "Washington at Braddock's Defeat," by Earl Horter; "Washington's Courtship," by W. Auerbach-Levy; "Washington at Pohick Church," by Ernest D. Roth; "En Route the Continental Congress," by Eugene Higgins; "Washington Assumes Command," by Ralph Boyer; "The British Evacuate Boston," by Allen Lewis; "The Retreat from Long Island," by Levon West; "Washington at Valley Forge," by George Wright; "Washington and Lee at Monmouth," by Kerr Eby; "The Surrender of Cornwallis," by Louis Mora; "Washington Prevents a Military Dictatorship," by Albert Sterner; "Washington's Farewell to His Officers," by Samuel Chamberlain; "Washington, the Planter," by Louis Rosenberg; "The Constitutional Convention," by John W. Winkler; "New York Welcomes the President-elect," by Robert Lawson; "Lady Washington's Levee," by Walter Tittle, and "Washington at Mt. Vernon," by Childe Hassam.

Approaching these prints without regard for their historical association, certain of them fail to appeal while others are excellent. Heintzelman's study of Washington as a boy has engaging graphic quality.

The subjects associated with Washington's journeys in this neighborhood are good, notably that of Washington and Gist leaving Fort Le Boeuf after delivering Gov. Dinwiddie's message to the French by Gallagher and Washington at Braddock's Defeat by Horter.

Other of the prints that delight aside from their association interest are those by Roth, Higgins, Lewis, Rosenberg, West and Winkler. The etchings will be on view for the coming fornight.

TWO OFFICERS HELD; ACCUSER ARRESTED

Deputy Constables Abe Feldman and Hyman Shalansky were held for court last night by Justice of the Peace Tony Savatt, of Stowe Township, on charges of extortion and forgery. Immediately afterward Charles W. Schenecker, their prosecutor, was arrested on a charge of resisting an officer.

Schenecker, a Beechview contractor, accused the two constables of attempting to extort $32.50 following his arrest on a charge of passing a worthless check. The constables denied the charge, blaming their arrest on political strife in the Hill district. The constables and Schenecker posted bonds.

The charge against Schenecker was filed before Justice of the Peace Lawrence V. Gibb, of Sewickley, out of whose office Feldman now works.

Feldman has been indicted by the grand jury, charged with unlawful registration and perjury. It was charged that on September 3 he registered in the Nineteenth District of the Fifth Ward, swearing falsely that he was born in the United States. He is not a citizen, according to the accusations.

LAKE CARRIERS FIGHT CANAL

CLEVELAND, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—The pending ratification of the St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty, providing for construction of a deep channel between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean, was promised today a newly organized and formidable opposition from the Lake Carriers' Association.

Representing the largest percentage of operators of bulk freighters on the Great Lakes, the executive committee of the association yesterday decided to take an organized fight against ratification before Congress, and was at work today on plans for the battle.

A resolution by the committee said the vessel interests represented by the association are opposed to the waterway "for reasons which will be compiled and presented to the congressional committee to which the proposed treaty has been referred."

FETE RETIRING POLICE HERO

The presentation was made by Inspector Harry J. Mellon, who praised Kelly's record as a policeman. Lieut. Edwin McCoy and Sergt. John Vinson also spoke.

Kelly was shot down in two gun battles with bandits about 15 years ago. A day after he had been released from the hospital, where he had been confined for several months with bullet wounds, he was shot down again.

How Coughs and Colds Yield to Creosote

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Judge Dithrich also granted a divorce to Minnie May Stewart, 917 Seventeenth street, Coraopolis, who told the court her husband, William Lang Stewart, Aliquippa, had been going with another girl. She testified he gave her three days' notice he was leaving. They were married in 1926.

NEW INVENTION 'TASTES' FOOD

The invention of an "electric palate," a delicate device which will effectively detect the flavor of foods, was announced today by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

The meter, which will be known as an electryx, measures a millionth of an ampere, or one-tenth the power of a house fly's wing, and will detect electric currents constantly flowing in fruit drinks and meat.

It was invented by R. C. Hitchcock, an electronic engineer. It is smaller than a baseball and cylindrical in form, with a dial on one face and two needle-like legs on the other.

EATON SEEKING RULE ON QUIZ OF P. S. C.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Oliver K. Eaton, counsel for the Senate committee investigating the Public Service Commission, has asked the committee to decide how far the inquiry shall go into the banking and brokerage accounts of present and former members of the commission.

Eaton requested subpenas for such data from Chairman Clyde L. King, Commissioners P. Stephen Stahlnecker, George W. Woodruff and S. Ray Shelby and former Commissioners James S. Benn and Richard J. Beamish.

He made his request after informing the investigators that Benn had refused to furnish the information; that Shelby had ignored the request and that the others—all recent appointees of Gov. Pinchot—had supplied partial data.

DATA OFFERED

Eaton had asked bank and brokerage information covering the last 10 years; King, Stahlnecker, Woodruff and Beamish offered data for the period since they became commissioners.

The committee received Eaton's request without comment and subsequently deferred action at a short executive session. Senator William S. Rial, Westmoreland, chairman, announced a decision would be made at a future meeting when all members are present. Hearings are to be resumed Wednesday.

The committee devoted its three-hour session yesterday to examination of two witnesses, M. A. Miller, secretary-treasurer of the Penn Central Light and Power Company, and A. B. Millar, executive director of the Pennsylvania Electric Association and a former employe of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit.

REPUDIATES TESTIMONY

The highlight of the day was Millar's statement that testimony he gave before the 1931 Senate committee investigating public utilities was not true. At that inquiry Millar testified that in 1923 when he was an employe of the P. R. T. he had not made plans for a trip to Europe with the late W. D. B. Ainey, then chairman of the commission.

Millar said today he had discussed with Ainey the stateroom accommodations on a steamship, had purchased tickets for the chairman and his physician, "Dr. Murphy," and had met Ainey in New York and accompanied him to the boat.

He agreed with Eaton that "there was nothing accidental in those arrangements," but asserted the European trip "had nothing to do with" any rate case the P. R. T. may have had pending before the commission.

CHECKS PRODUCED

Eaton produced seven checks totaling $95,000 and issued to Millar by the P. R. T. from April 13 to September 5, 1923. Millar identified his indorsement but said he could not recall the purpose of the checks nor whether he had cashed them. Eaton asked at one point:

"Did the P. R. T. have a rate case on then, June 1, 1923?"

Millar replied:

"I think it did."

Daniels in Drive To Oust Donkey For Rooster

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—A Democratic campaign of his own has been launched by Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson cabinet and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer.

He would change the emblem of the party from the donkey to a rooster. Printing a crowing rooster on his paper's front page, Daniels said it was hoped:

"This will result in the re-adoption of the rooster and letting the donkey go into desuetude."

TWO GET LIFE FOR MURDER

Joseph Schaefer and George Young, under indictment in Elizabeth, N. J., for the slaying of John Finellio, of Pittsburgh, a federal prohibition agent, two years ago in a raid on the Rising Sun Brewery at Elizabeth, yesterday were convicted in St. Paul, Minn., for the murder of Abe Loeb in a gang war in that city, July 25. Judge C. F. McNally sentenced each to life imprisonment, according to news from St. Paul.

Finellio worked in the Pittsburgh district before being assigned to New Jersey. He was shot to death when he and other agents entered the brewery. Young and Schaefer were being sought for his murder under the names of Newman and Silverberg, when arrested for the murder of Loeb. After the Finellio murder they were said to have gone to Minnesota and joined a narcotic peddling gang. Loeb was said by New York police to have been known as Abe Wagner, once sought in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping case.

ACTRESS-WIFE SUES VIDOR

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Marking the end of a motion picture romance, Eleanor Boardman, widely-known as an actress, filed suit in Superior Court here against her film director husband, King W. Vidor. She charged Vidor with cruelty and named Miss Betty Hill as co-respondent.

Miss Boardman asked for a reasonable sum for the support of herself and their two daughters, Antonia Vidor, 5, and Belinda Vidor, 2. She also asked the court to restrain Vidor from disposing of about $1,000,000 in community property, which was described as consisting of stocks, bonds, commissions, contracts and royalties.

Vidor, both before and after his separation from his wife, insisted on associating with other women to the extent that his asserted conduct "became a matter of gossip and scandal," according to the complaint.

BROKAWS FIGHT FOR CHILD

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Mrs. Clare Boothe Brokaw, associate editor of Vanity Fair, is opposing her divorced husband's bid for custody of their daughter in court with a plea for permanent custody of the little girl. She said:

"Anne Clare doesn't want to live with her father. My feelings should not be considered, of course, but neither should those of Mr. Brokaw. What my daughter wants is what matters."

George Tuttle Brokaw contended that under a separation agreement before the divorce he and his wife were to share custody of 6-year-old Anne Clare for alternate six-month periods and that Mrs. Brokaw refused to surrender her.

Supreme Court Justice Joseph M. Callahan reserved decision.

Emmett C. Pendleton, 29, said to be a member of a prominent family of Whitfield, Va., was ordered held for Alderman Thomas D. Ruth Beyers, 27, of Cleveland, O., arrested with Pendleton in a downtown hotel Sunday, was held for federal authorities under the Mann Act.

The arrest was made by City Detectives William Sullivan and Charles Weizenhofer, after a man at the hotel complained he had been robbed of $30. According to Sullivan, Pendleton has served time in Harrisburg, Pa., and Columbus, O., and has been traveling with the Beyers woman as man and wife. Three bad checks were passed by Pendleton on a previous visit here, Sullivan said.

The Rev. Marsh Field, pastor of the McClure Avenue Episcopal Church, appeared in court as a character witness for Pendleton.

The 'Twentieth Century Club gave its first Thursday musicale in the clubhouse yesterday afternoon before an unusually large group of members. Ellenor Cook, a most delightful young person, who has been scouting about the Balkans and Slav countries in search of folk materials, entertained in the pleasantest fashion.

Mr. Lissfelt

In search of the truth in music I have spent many happy hours among peasants and in out-of-the-way corners of the earth, following in wedding and funeral trains, dancing czardas and landler, listening to harvesters and soldiers, and so Ellenor Cook's music was beautiful for me. She gave us in four settings and with authentic costumes not only some pretty pictures but some excellent tunes.

Miss Cook's voice is unpretentious, trained only for its simple needs of projecting these naive folk songs. If you read what modern composers are trying to do with the quarter tone scale and other discordant—to us discordant—note clusters you do get a fair idea of what most primitive music sounds like, especially when performed by peasants themselves.

And so in this case it is quite beside the point if the singer deviates from pitch, for honestly stated, if that is a defect in her singing, then she is nearer the truth; if she does it intentinoally, well then she is a very clever young lady.

Her gestures were fortunately economically conceived. She made very apt and brief translations of her songs. Maryann Shelley, in male costume corresponding to Miss Cook's own pretty dresses, played neat accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

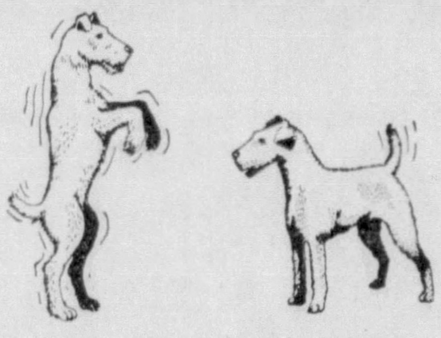
HE CAN'T DO IT AS LONG!



Bowser gives only a short-lived performance on two legs. Nature provided him with four because of a fundamental principle in the scheme of things. Imagine a table or a chair with only two legs! Balance would be impossible!

It's the four-square support of the vital elements in Eveready Raytheons that guards the balance of their delicately assembled parts and insures their performance life. Four pillars! All other tubes have only two. Inspect them. See for yourself. And then—remember the four-support principle. It's your own heel, toe, heel, toe arrangement that keeps you upright. With legs alone you'd be like a man on stilts! You wouldn't remain upright very long!

Your dealer will demonstrate four-pillar tubes. Visit him!

Listening In On Radio Gossip

Catherine Field, the NBC songster, is touring at present with the road company of "The Cat and the Fiddle" . . . Franklyn Baur, who co-starred with Vaughn de Leath on the air several years ago, is due to return to the ether waves soon . . . The Marx Brothers, to participate in a movie banquet broadcast Friday night of next week, have been negotiating for regular air programs, according to reports . . . 'Okay' O'Keefe's new collection of barroom ballads and tear jerkers will be out in the near future . . . Virginia Arnold, who married Don Ball recently, has given up all of her radio work with the exception of a morning sponsored program over CBS.

Miss Field

After three years of network six-a-week broadcasts, Amos 'n' Andy have been reduced to a five-a-week schedule, effective this weekend . . . as have the Goldbergs . . . The blackface comics will be off the air now Saturday night as well as Sunday.

Now that the political to-do has quieted a bit, statisticians come forth with the following: Conservatively speaking, the cost of audience's demonstrations for national speakers over the networks was about $200 a minute, based on the average cost of about $12,000 an hour for time alone for nation-wide hookups over a single network . . . Even Al Smith's frequent cautions that "raddio time is expensive" failed often to quell time-taking applause . . . The Republicans spent some $500,000 and the Democrats about $300,000, with approximately a half million additional for both parties on radio locally throughout the country, for their respective radio campaigns.

During a recent studio rehearsal, Norman Brokenshire served as an alarm clock for Ruth Etting . . . She'd been so busy with broadcasts, benefits and movie shorts that she had gone without sleep for nearly two days.

You never can tell just what will grow out of kidding when two comedians get together . . . The other night on a benefit program, Raymond Knight and Ray Perkins did a little act in which they called themselves "Two Little Rays of Raydeo" . . . and now five prospective sponsors are asking how much they want to keep up the tom-foolery . . . It's just possible that they may keep it up, too, what's more . . .

CAPITAL WARNS IDLE MARCHERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP.) District of Columbia authorities today telegraphed governors of the 48 states urging them to discourage pilgrimages of needy people to Washington this winter. The message read:

"Information has reached District of Columbia government that large bodies of unemployed persons propose marching upon the national capital intent upon making various demands upon Congress at is opening, December 5.

"They propose commencing marches within a few days. Local government is utterly without funds either to house or feed them. Resources of local charities falling far short of meeting local demands, and these demands are heavily increasing without prospect of additional help.

"Groups of this character before starting should distinctly understand that on arrival in Washington, neither food nor lodging can be furnished them, and their trip will inevitably bring great discomfort and much hardship."

PAPEN SEEKS HITLER PARLEY

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Chancellor Franz von Papen invited Adolf Hitler and four other political party leaders today to a meeting to determine how far they are willing to support the government in its political and economic program.

Others invited, in accordance with the instructions given to the Chancellor by President von Hindenburg, were Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, Nationalist; Dr. Ludwig Kaas, Centrist; Herr Schaeffer, Bavarian Populist; and Edward Dingeldey, German Populist.

In government circles it was intimated that if Hitler, National Socialist party leader, refuses to meet with the Chancellor, it is doubtful whether President von Hindenburg will receive him at a later stage in negotiations.

Coffin Is Ordered, 'Too Old Dog' Runs Away

READING, Pa., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—An advertisement, "For Sale—One dog coffin," today told a story of a dog that wasn't too old to learn a new trick.

The coffin, made by a worker in the Reading Relief Committees's handicraft shop, had been ordered by a woman who planned to have her pet dog killed and buried because of its advanced age.

But before it was completed, the dog ran away.

AIMEE SUFFERS NEW COLLAPSE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, the spectacular evangelist, is recovering from the effects of another serious collapse from which she was revived only after two physicians were called.

This became known after her departure from Murietta Hot Springs. She was reported to be improved, but still "in need of much rest and solitude."

The evangelist swooned while she and her intimate friend and secretary, Emma Schaffer, were listening to radio election returns.

Mrs. Hutton was unconscious for more than three hours. Her baritone husband, David Hutton, was called. Yesterday he took his wife from the resort. Mrs. Hutton was taken to the automobile in a wheel chair.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Bananas as Health Food for Babies

Until recently, little was known concerning an unusual ailment called "celiac disease." It was first reported in 1888, but it was not until the early part of this century that its true nature was understood. There yet remains a great deal to be learned about this strange disease. I am glad the research continues because the trouble threatens the health and lives of many children.

Dr. Copeland

Celiac disease usually afflicts children who live under unhealthful and unsanitary conditions, but it occurs, too, among the rich as well as the poor. It is most common in infants between the ages of nine and 18 months. Bottle-fed babies are more liable to the disease than breast-fed infants.

Children suffering from this disease show definite signs of arrested growth and development. They are underweight, undersized, tire easily and are unable to walk.

Celiac disease is believed to be caused by an inability of the body to utilize fats, starches, and certain sugars. A large proportion of the food eaten is of no benefit.

To overcome this deficiency, it is advisable to give the child a diet containing little fat and fibrous material. This diet is best obtained by giving skimmed protein milk or skimmed lactic acid milk. Your doctor will tell you about these.

Within recent years the banana has been successfully used in the feeding of infants and young children suffering from celiac disease. When given to infants, the strained ripe pulp of the fruit is used with a portion of milk. The banana diet has been beneficial in cases where all other efforts have failed.

Many authorities believe that this disease is caused by taking an excess of starches and omitting fresh fruits and vegetables in the diet of the child. Care and study of the diet will prevent the danger of celiac disease.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Beautiful Tribute

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a problem that nothing during my past experience will help me solve, and since it is one in which correct procedure is a delicate operation, I have come to you.

Almost a year ago a boy of whom I was very fond died in a tragic accident. At that time I sent the correct message of sympathy to his parents whom I knew slightly.

I wish on the day of his death to remember Tom's going with flowers, yellow rose and chrysanthemums. As it is impossible for me to go to his grave, it is in a small up-state town I wish to wire these. Now to whom or how shall they be sent?

Can I send them to Tom's mother? She adored him but really I doubt if she would know from whom they came and somehow I feel she might want to. Yet, if they were to be placed on the grave through some other agency, she might not realize there are others who miss him. I don't mean that I want to impress her with my being, merely that I don't want to intrude on a sorrow that for her seems to have no end, yet I want to let her feel that we others who knew Tom share it. He was wonderful.

Will you please help me?

READER.

What a beautiful letter you wrote me, and what an especially sensitive and fine person you must be to plan such a lovely tribute to this friend and to his stricken mother. Bless you for it, and for your contribution in keeping alive in this world high memories and sweet tributes to "those who stand in the sunshine."

I have a plan for your sending the flowers which I hope may meet your approval. This is, to send two boxes of flowers, duplicates, each yellow roses and chrysanthemums, as you have planned. One to be telegraphed to the sexton of the cemetery, to be placed on the grave. The other to be sent to the mother. Then, inclosed in the box of flowers to be sent to the mother, you could explain, quite easily and naturally, that you have sent a similar box of flowers to the grave.

Of course, my dear friend, she would wish to know that her son's friends "remembered" . . . this will be her high comfort on this sad anniversary. And I do think that if you take this way of telling her and of comforting her, she will appreciate it. Don't you?

ROMANCE ENDS FOR WRITER

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Living next to nature in the wilderness may appeal to a retired United States Army officer, Mrs. Lucene G. Taliaferro, writer and artist, said today, but she prefers the security and comfort of her Willow Glen retreat.

The husband has sued for a divorce at Reno, charging cruelty. Mrs. Taliaferro said she planned a counter suit.

She said:

"When my husband, Lieut. Col. Lucian H. Taliaferro, demanded that I leave Hollywood and go with him into the wilderness to live next to nature, I refused flatly. I will not give up my art and writing. So we separated."

Blue Law Repeal or Revision is Seen

By MARK SHIELDS

Only adverse action by the Senate, or a veto by the Governor, will prevent either repeal or drastic amendment of the Sunday Blue Laws in the next session of the Legislature.

Mr. Shields

By a narrow squeak a bill to liberalize the Sunday restrictions passed the session of 1931, sentiment growing gradually. The first bills put forward were defeated, but eventually a bare majority of one vote was mustered on behalf of a measure which circuitously would have changed the archaic regulations.

The results of Tuesday's elections mean more votes for a direct repealer, though reserving to counties or municipalities local option as to how their people shall be permitted to conduct themselves. Practically every Democrat elected was pledged to Blue Law revision. Examination of replies to questionnaires answered by the Democratic candidates at the request of the Sun-Telegraph prior to the primary indicates this sentiment.

There will be, therefore, three or four, perhaps six, additional votes for liberalization from Allegheny County. Philadelphia will contribute its usual 41 votes, the seven Democrats there being as liberal on this subject as the Republicans they defeated.

Increase in Blue Law Repeal Strength

In rural counties in the western end of the state, where Republicans by platoons fell before the Democratic scythe, there will be an increase in Blue Law repeal strength, for the majority of western Republican members are devoted to things as they are, so far as Sunday observance is concerned.

The Senate heretofore has been opposed to any relaxation of the law. Tuesday's results, however, may have a salutary effect on the minds of some gentlemen in that branch of the General Assembly.

Gov. Pinchot is not, on the basis of past expressions, sympathetic to any movement to redraft the Sunday law. Yet the Governor is a great exponent of the rule of the people, of making government responsive to the desires of average citizens. Therefore, if the House, with a fresh mandate from the voters, should repeal the 1794 statute, it would be reasonable to expect the Governor to yield to that sentiment.

No constitutional question would be involved, and the issue would be clear-cut as to whether the people should have what a majority of their representatives, newly indorsed, decree.

Coyne Will Have to Speed Investigation

Senator James J. Coyne will have to speed up his investigation into the costs of county government. Two of the five members of his committee, Representatives Soffel and Neely, were not candidates for re-election Tuesday. A fifth, Representative James Wettach, of the Seventh District, on the North Side, was defeated by a Democrat.

The terms of all three expire December 1, which leaves only Coyne and Senator Morris Einstein as continuing members of the Legislature. That is not a quorum.

With respect to the committee investigating utilities, the situation is somewhat different. Senators Rial and Earnest were not candidates, and their terms expire December 1. Senator Clippinger was defeated Tuesday, and he also ceases to be a state official with the end of this month. But there will remain four senators—Coyne, Salus, Pethick and Roberts—a majority of the committee and a quorum.

The question as to the tenure of Rial and Earnest was raised before informally, at which time it was said there were provisions of the law to permit them to continue to function, though how was never explicitly stated. The question as to this committee is not so important as that of Coyne, however, as it will continue to have a sufficient number of members to conduct business under any conditions.

Result Should Be Beneficial All Around

The wreckage of Tuesday is too great to be comprehended, even yet. Legislators were buried in districts where Republican nomination had always been tantamount to a certificate of election, and the fall campaign never was more than an empty formality. There will be some unusual persons in Washington and Harrisburg, but candor impels the further statement that some of those defeated were rather questionably of statesmanlike caliber. They had never needed any more capability than a Republican nomination.

At the same time, it is beyond doubt that some good men suffered, and the hope of their districts must be that their successors will serve well. By and large, the result should be beneficial all around, for there had grown up a feeling that there never would be a reckoning for evasive representation, or representation totally out of line with the desires of the people at home.

Grieving for Wife Man Takes Poison

Philip Zola, 46, of 1809 Harcums way, was in South Side Hospital today suffering from the effects of poison swallowed in his home last night, according to a police report. Zola was said to have been grieving over the death six months ago of his wife.

INVALID WOMAN FELLED BY ROBBERS

Daughter and Maid Menaced by Pair At Slovan

When the maid, Mary Kukal, 19, opened the door, they pushed their way in, knocked her against the wall and aimed revolvers at Harold Horovitz, 22, a Pitt medical student; Florence Horovitz, 17, and 4-year-old Joseph.

When Harold advanced towards them, one slugged him over the head with the revolver. He fell unconscious.

His wife, Mrs. Esther Horovitz, 44, lifted herself out of bed and walked uncertainly downstair. She collapsed under their blows.

Florence ran out the front door to a neighbor's and telephoned for aid. But before Burgettstown police arrived the two had taken $350 from Horovitz's pockets and fled. Horovitz conducts a store in Slovan.

That was at 8 o'clock last night. Early today Police Chief J. E. Dowden arrested a suspect in Burgettstown. The man was drunk and trying to steal an auto, the chief said. He was identified as one of the gunmen by Harold.

SEEK TO TRACE 'GHOST' BONDS

Attempting to show that the bank's legal reserve did not meet the requirements of the banking laws and that it was misrepresented in the report to the State Banking Department, the prosecution in the trial of A. D. Smith, former secretary-treasurer of the closed Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue, called bank officials and employes, member of the Bellevue School Board and George F. Taylor, Jr., special deputy secretary of banking, to the witness stand yesterday.

Officials of the bank, including President Robert J. Gibson, Vice President C. C. Elste, and W. I. Vickerman and George J. Campbell, directors, testified Smith told them the bank had $50,000 in Liberty bonds in its legal reserve a short time before the bank closed.

Deputy Secretary Taylor likewise sad he had heard Smith say the bank had these bonds, but that later it was discovered the reserve fund did not contain the bonds, and that as a result there was no chance for reorganizing the institution.

Vandals in Donora Damage Tombstones

DONORA, Pa., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Desecration of between 80 and 90 tombstones in the Fellf Cemetery, dating back to revolutionary days, was reported by police today.

Many of the markers were overturned and some were cracked with a hammer, cemetery officials said.

SQUIRES 'GYP' PUBLIC, SAYS M'GOVERN

Denounces System of Justices Imposing Costs on County

As a result of the audit of the county's fiscal affairs being made by Main & Co., the the County Solicitor's office is going to try to put a stop to what Commissioner Charles C. McGovern calls "gypping" the public by Justices of the Peace and police officers.

A report submitted by M. C. Conick to the Commissioners recommends that the entire subject of costs in discharged criminal cases be referred to the Solicitor to determine what limitations the county may impose on aldermen, justices of the peace and constables for imposing costs on the county. It also recommends that Quarter Sessions Court be informed of the practices, that corrective legislation be passed and that all the minor judicial officers be instructed to prepare informations in such a manner that the Controller can check the correctness of the costs imposed on the county.

$500,000 PAID OUT

Conick's report states that more than $500,000 has been paid out in costs over a five-year period but that it was difficult to determine if the costs were proper.

Commenting on the report McGovern said:

"This is one of the most important matters in the county's fiscal affairs. These justices of the peace take cases for collection agencies and through civil proceedings collect the money and then by discharging cases of larceny by bailee at the cost of the county get two cases out of every one. Somebody especially adapted to the work should be put on this matter because the constables' organization and the justices of the peace have a h—l of a lot of influence. All the recommendations in this report are in my Controller's report for 1927.

"Another thing, too, is police officers collecting witness fees. Those bums from all over the county have flooded the courthouse and smelled the people out just to collect fees that the law does not permit them to take. If we get at this we can stop it."

NAMES OFFICIALS

Conick's report lists costs collected from the period December, 1930, to April, 1931, illustrating the practice attributed to the minor judiciary. In this period, according to the report, Justice of the Peace James J. Westwood, of McKees Rocks, collected $2,204.80 and William A. Meissner, his constable, $3,742.10; Justice of the Peace Walter Wickline, of McKees Rocks, collected $1,513.70 and Constable Albert Street $2,102.45; Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson, of Mt. Lebanon, collected $839.90 and his son, Constable John C. Edmundson, $671.50.

All the cases were discharged for "insufficient evidence to convict." In one of his conclusions in the report Conick states:

"The county, through the media of aldermen and justices of the peace, is being used as a common collection agency and arbitrator of family quarrels at great expense."

WILD CARGO

By FRANK BUCK
With EDWARD ANTHONY

Buck Has Odd Experiences With Poisonous Snake, Escaping Crane

CHAPTER XXVI.

One of my unexpected profits came through the tragic death of a green barbet, a beautiful but quite common and ordinary specimen. I had picked the barbet up in the market place at Kuala Lumpur, capital of the Federated Malay States. Strolling there one day, I had noticed a boy carrying two big boxes heavily covered with gunny sacking. It was not difficult to guess that under each of the sacks was a bird cage.

A native always covers his cages in bringing birds to market. When wild specimens fresh from the jungle, which is what these chaps usually have to offer, are permitted to look at new surroundings, they bang their heads against the cage sides and tops in their nervous excitement over the confusion around them.

I called the boy over to see if he had anything I wanted. Seeing that I was interested, he uncovered the cage to which I pointed and announced that it contained sapula burong seeal (10 wood partridges). And fine specimens they were too—of the green red-crested variety. I bought them.

Then I asked him what he had in the other cage. "Duo burong" (two birds) was all I could get out of him. It was plain that he didn't know what species they were. I asked him to let me have a look.

A FIERCE FIGHTER

The second he uncovered the cage he set up a great wailing. One of the birds—a beautiful jambo pigeon—was dead. It was obvious from the condition of its head that it had been killed by the other occupant of the cage—a blue-fronted green barbet.

I tried to get it through the boy's head that it was foolish to place a peaceful bird like the jambo in the same cage with a fierce fighter like the barbet.

Robber Confesses As 6 Identify Him

Francis O'Donnell, 28, of Norristown, Pa., who confessed participation in 14 chain store robberies in the Pittsburgh district, was held for court today by Magistrate J. J. Sweeney on charges of carrying concealed weapons, breaking and entering and larceny.

Six persons identified O'Donnell. Asked if he had anything to say, O'Donnell said he was guilty in all the jobs "and one besides." He was arrested Wednesday at Mayview by Detectives Elmer Hunter and John Shaughnessy.

Killing Over Light Brings Conviction

An argument over the use of electric light after 10 o'clock at night today led to the conviction of Peter Zanich, 44, of Rankin, for voluntary manslaughter. A jury convicted him in the death of Michael Kinalo, 49, who operated the rooming house at 325 Fourth street, Rankin, in which Zanich lived. Testimony was that Zanich stabbed Kinalo 53 times when the landlord turned out Zanich's light.

Farmer Defeated At Polls Ends Life

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Despondency over his defeat for a county commissionership on the Republican ticket caused H. C. Burns, Adair County farmer, to end his life by drinking poison, Mrs. Burns told authorities today. The widow and 13 children survive.

GIVES UP $620 IN HOLDUP

Diener, a produce dealer, had just left his house when the robber stopped him, flourished a revolver, and commanded him to put up his hands. Several persons were waiting for a Negley avenue street car a few yards away. So quickly did the robber work they had no opportunity to intervene.

After taking the money, which Diener was carrying to his place of business, the bandit ran into an alley and disappeared. The victim told police he heard an automobile start in a nearby street, but did not know whether the robber had escaped in it.

FAIL TO AGREE ON MILK PRICE

A six-hour conference between 50 representatives of leading milk distributors in Pittsburgh and about 60 dairy men ended early today without reaching an agreement on a new price scale for milk.

Another conference will be held when Dr. Clyde King, chairman of the Public Service Commission, can attend, as arbitrator. He was to have attended last night's meeting, but was prevented by illness.

Watchman Beaten, Robbed in Homestead

Three robbers early today bound and gagged Lee Pittman, 48, watchman in the lumber office of Kerr & Ingram, Seventh avenue and West street, Homestead, battered open the safe and fled with $13 taken from Pittman's pocket. No money was in the safe.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 11.

To the Editor Sun-Telegraph.

Well, the returns are pretty much all in. All but Kentucky, they got a law they can't count their votes till everybody sobers up, so it will be quite a little bit before we get them. I was surprised at the vote the Republicans poled in Mississippi and Louisiana. I thought there was more post-offices there than there is. California and several states voted to do away with their local enforcement laws. Now out here liquors and wines are classed as "perishable goods" and are given right away on highways and trains.

Will Rogers

Democrats had such a hard time getting money to campaign on that I doubt if they will have enough to get to Washington on.

Yours, WILL.

WARNS RELIEF FUNDS SHORT

A warning was sounded by the Allegheny County Emergency Association last night that unless further financial assistance is forthcoming by Monday, its 38,000 dependent families will face a starvation period.

The emergency is caused, leaders said, by delay of state authorities in allocating among counties its share of the $5,462,265 loan by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Senator Frank J. Harris, county relief chairman, has asked for $848,000.

Relief is now being distributed mainly from funds received from the city and the Talbott state appropriation. These funds will be exhausted by Monday, it was said.

Harris today said that nothing can be done about the shortage until tomorrow as all state offices are closed for Armistice Day. He said he would be in touch with Executive Secretary William B. Rodgers, of the State Emergency Relief Board, distributor of public aid to counties, and would exert every effort to obtain further funds. Harris said he did not know of the emergency until notified by the Emergency Association last night.

'Good-Bye Dolly, Must Leave You,' Sings 'Sweet Alice'

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

After that Democratic streamline victory what about Dolly Gann and Alice Longworth?

Both girls are now relatives-at large.

Alice has a brother in the Philippines. Which is a splendid hide-away for a Republican at this time.

But Dolly has nothing. Remember when she startled Washington society by doing some light housekeeping with one chair in a conspicuous spot?

It was one of those Washington official dinners where you come in person to give your regrets to the hostess. You're a disappointment if you don't get there. And you're a disappointment if you do.

Dolly swept in majestically to the tune, "Where My Caravan Has Rested."

Alice led the rush of Roxy's ushers. She was head usher that night.

Alice said in a rough feminine voice:

Delightful affair. A pleasant time was had by nobody.

URGES GREATER EFFORTS IN FUND DRIVE

Witherow Predicts Hard Task; Total Passes Million

The Welfare Fund drive for more than $2,500,000 for its 1933 budget slipped into its third day today with 40 per cent of its goal achieved. Campaign leaders refused, however, to predict easy attainment of their goal.

A total of $1,089,879.50 has been raised by the 800 workers, soliciting gifts, it was reported at today's report meeting.

Present indications are that large gifts to the fund will total but approximately $1,500,000, according to leaders of the drive. The balance will be sought from small givers in house-to-house, office and factory solicitation.

URGES EVERY EFFORT

Commenting upon the amount of money raised in the first two days, W. P. Witherow, drive chairman, said:

"Although we have raised a total of 40 per cent of our requested budget for 1933, we are not so optimistic as to believe that we shall easily secure the requested $2,500,000.

"Every effort and gifts from every possible source will be necessary if we are to attain success."

Campaign rallies, meetings and luncheons were slated in many sections today.

Largest among them was a noon report luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce Restaurant. David M. Craig, chairman of the men's teams of the central division, was to be in charge, with Attorney W.

A list of contributions to the Welfare Fund appears on Page 13.

PLEDGES CITED BY ELLENBOGEN

Henry Ellenbogen, elected to Congress Tuesday in the Thirty-third district, today pledged himself to carry out the provisions of his pre-election program. In a statement he said:

"In my platform I have stressed the necessity of public works and improvements being undertaken by the federal government on a large scale for the purpose of providing work for the unemployed and thus give the first strong push to trade, industry and commerce that will start us out of the depression.

"I also reaffirm my belief that true temperance will be promoted by the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and immediate modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale and manufacture of light wines and beer, and I shall be active to bring about that change. These are the outstanding principles of my platform."

NEW DIRECTORY LISTS ODD JOBS

Paul Revere could still find eight horseshoers and six livery stables in the city despite the modern age, according to the new 1932 city directory being issued here today with listings for 369,496 personal and business names.

Lest a person thinks there are no business fields without competition, the directory reveals out of 985 different enterprises there are 207 classifications represented each by a single concern. The wide variety of business shows activities such as alcohol dealers, lapidaries, numismatists and lightning rod manufacturers.

The directory reveals "back-to-the-farm" movements failed to make inroads on city population, for the total names equal the 1931 edition, according to the publishers. Dormont, Mt. Lebanon and Homestead are included in the edition.

MOTHER PINS HERO'S MEDAL ON WOUNDED SON HERE

DECORATION IS FIFTH WON BY OFFICER

"Mother" Edmonds, as she is known to thousands of wounded soldiers, present and former patients of the United States Marine Hospital, Penn avenue, today pinned a Silver Star medal for heroism on the breast of her distinguished wounded hero son, Lieut. George L. Edmonds.

Mrs. A. E. Edmonds, of Etna, has been hostess of the Red Cross Hut at the hospital for the past 10 years. Her son, possessor of five distinguished service medals, has been a patient at the hospital for more than a year and a half. He was gassed and wounded.

GIVEN SILVER MEDAL

From the War Department yesterday came the Silver Star decoration, awarded him for "gallantry in action in the face of the enemy." Last month he was awarded the Purple Heart. He also wears the Distinguished Service Cross, Croix de Guerre and Order of Danilo medal. Serving in the 11th United States Infantry when he was decorated in France for bravery, he later was assigned to the Third Army Composite Regiment, Gen. Pershing's parade escort. He is married and has an 11-year-old daughter, Betty Jane.

ORGANIZE ETNA CHAPTER

"Mother" Edmonds organized the Red Cross in Etna during the war. When the boys came home she volunteered hospital work and started in Parkview. For the past 10 years she has been at the Marine Hospital.

Accompanying her son and many wounded soldiers in the Armistice Day parade, "Mother" Edmonds said:

"It has been a sad but interesting work for me. I will continue on as long as the boys need me. The organization is in urgent need for shaving cream and toothpaste, but most of all the boys want cigarets."

These supplies are scarce now, due to the depression, and often sick vets are unable to get the cigarets which would help make less monotonous their long day of suffering.

'NUMBERS' MAN SHIELDS BOSS

Frank Lapinski, 28, of Allequippa street, who described himself as a numbers "pick-up" man, refused in Central Police Court today to disclose the man for whom he worked.

Lapinski was arrested last night while, police say, he was trying to break into an automobile parked in Smithfield street near Sixth avenue. He testified:

"After I had turned in my money collected in the numbers racket last night, a friend and I toured the speakeasies on the Hill and got pretty drunk. We tried to get into the automobile to start the radio going."

When Magistrate Leo Rothenberg asked Lapinski the name of his employer, he replied:

"I won't tell his name as I don't want to incriminate him."

Schoolgirl's Subway Suicide Effort Fails

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Florence Nestule, 14, school girl, was recovering today after loneliness and worry led her to attempt suicide by throwing herself in front of a subway train last night. She landed lengthwise on the tracks, so the wheels of a car missed her. Since the death two years ago of her mother, she had mothered the six other children in the home.

UNIT DIVISION MEETS

An organization meeting of the unit division was to be held in the Methodist Church at Springdale at 6:30 p. m. today.

At the luncheon meeting yesterday, Witherow sounded the spirit of sacrifice as the keynote. He quoted from a letter in which a bed-ridden woman sent $5 for relief "of persons who are disabled through no fault of their own."

County employes yesterday agreed, at a meeting presided over by Controller Robert G. Woodside, to give three days' pay to the fund. City employes agreed to give unspecified amounts.

The city Department of Supplies today was preparing an ordinance which is expected to reach Council on Monday, asking a $50,000 appropriation for shoes for the city's needy to be distributed through the Allegheny County Emergency Association. Mrs. Enoch Rauh, head of the Welfare Department, suggested the ordinance.

COTS ORDERED

Several months ago the city appropriated $50,000 for shoes from the $800,000 emergency appropriation the city made out of the $3,000,000 emergency bond issue. Of the first $50,000, about $28,000 has been spent for shoes. Relief directors said the second appropriation is requested so that when it is needed shoes can be obtained without any lapse of time.

Director W. R. Dunlap yesterday awarded three contracts for cots, cot pads and pillows for the new men's dormitory being erected at the city home at Mayview. Homeless men will be quartered in the dormitory this winter. Taylor Brothers Company will furnish 300 duplex cots at $5.27 each and 600 cotton pads at $1.34 each. A. Mamaux & Sons Company will furnish pillows at 30 cents each.

AUTO KILLS BOY; CRASH HURTS 2

Francis Emory, 4, of 44 Friday street, Shaler Township, died last night in Homeopathic Hospital from injuries suffered several hours earlier when he was struck by an automobile near his home, the Coroner's office reported.

Jack Sleigh, of 17 Friday street, driver, told police the boy stepped into the path of his car. Sleigh was ordered to post bond at the Coroner's office.

Ernest Mannka, 31, of 1423 Laurel street, and Joseph Bloom, 32, of 1724 Metropolitan street, were in St. John's Hospital with injuries suffered when a truck in which they were riding collided with an automobile driven by George W. Kelly, 47, of 1418 Evandale street, at Chateau street and Columbus avenue last night.

A burned-out bulb in the traffic signal at the intersection was blamed for the accident.

The red signal, which should have stopped Kelly at the intersection, was not burning, it was said.

WILD CARGO -:- Another Thrilling Story of the Jungle by The Author of "Bring 'Em Back Alive" -:- By FRANK BUCK With EDWARD ANTHONY

There could be only one outcome—death for the pigeon. But all I could get out of him was more wailing. When I succeeded in calming him I made a deal with him for the barbet.

When I got back to my compound at Katong I placed the barbet in a wire cage which I hung from the limb of a small jungle cherry tree in the center of the lawn. In the past I had frequently placed bird cages in this and nearby trees, finding it an excellent means of keeping certain specimens bright and chipper.

On my trip across the lawn in the course of my varied activities at the compound I frequently stopped to have a look at the handsome little scrapper inside, occasionally feeding him a choice morsel.

One day as I passed the tree it struck me as odd that I could not see the bird. Although the bottom of the cage was slightly above the line of the eye, the barbet had always been visible due to the fact that he invariably occupied one of the perches (usually the middle one which was on the same level as the feed boxes).

VICTIM OF SNAKE

Standing under the tree, I called to the bird. No response of any kind. Not a sound reached my ears to indicate that the cage was occupied. I reached up, placing one hand on the bottom of the cage and one on the side, pushing the cage up to release the hook that held it to the limb.

As I worked the cage free I was astounded — and plenty scared, let me frankly add—by the sight of a snake poking its head through the wires. I let the cage drop to the ground. For I recognized the reptile as a yellow-banded mangrove, a very rare and poisonous snake, but at the same time, oddly enough, a variety practically unknown at that time in American zoos and for which I had received many inquiries.

As the cage landed on the ground I took in at a glance what had happened. The reptile had slipped into the cage from the tree and had swallowed the bird. The barbet, killer of the jambo, had himself succumbed to a mightier antagonist.

But the snake was also in trouble. The bulge made by the bird inside had made it impossible for the reptile to slip out through the wires of the cage in the way it had entered. Not until two or three days had elapsed would the meal be digested and the snake's shape be back to normal.

LOSS AND GAIN

I had lost a fifteen-dollar barbet and gained a snake so rare that any zoo in America would be glad to have it. That's one of those crazy things that are forever happening in my strange profession.

Gainer though I was by the swap, I had a fleeting urge to rap the killer over the head with the nearest heavy object. But that would have accomplished nothing. My barbet was dead.

Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars bought it for the New York Zoological Park, where to this day it squirms and twists behind a sheet of glass for the benefit of those who come to inspect its reptilian charms.

Catching a snake with a bird for bait is a bit unusual, I admit. But I can match it with a story, still more unusual, of roping a crane with a lasso.

I began using a lariat in my Texas home when I was a boy in knee breeches.

After I went abroad in search of wild life, I acquired the habit of always carrying a riata or western lasso with me on my collecting trips. It often came in handy. So there was nothing unusual in my getting out a rope one day aboard a cargo boat on which I was returning from Asia to America with a big shipment of birds and animals.

I had just finished inspecting my floating menagerie, and, having given my boys, Lal and Nemsi, their instructions, I sought relaxation. The idea of brushing up on my roping having occurred to me, I was now preparing to do that very thing. First I went through the familiar motions of taking the kinks out of the rope and giving it a good straightening out. As I busied myself with this task I was greeted by a big, good natured sailor.

"What do you use that for?" he asked.

SAILOR EXPLAINS

Seeing no reason for letting myself in for a recital of my feats with the rope (one reason being that I do not consider myself an unusual hand at lassoing), I decided to pretend that I knew nothing about the art.

"I suppose it wouldn't be a bad idea for a man in my game to know how to use one of these things," I said. "If anything got loose I could lasso it."

"I'm pretty good at it," replied the naive tar. "I'll show you how it's done."

A number of sailors crowded round as my new-found friend—whose name proved to be Curly, a playful commentary, no doubt, on his bald head—prepared to show me how to handle a rope.

Then he asked one of his pals to serve as a moving target. Curly's friend complied, running along the deck. The cowboy-sailor took 10 or 15 tries at him, roping him about once out of every three attempts.

"Now you try it," he said, thrusting the rope in my hand.

CRANE GETS LOOSE

I took the lariat and tried four or five careless heaves at the sailor who had constituted himself the official target. All my tries were misses, of course. In fact, I purposely held the rope incorrectly each time.

"You're not holding it right," said Curly, resuming his teaching. "Grab it like this."

I grabbed the rope as he suggested, and, as I did, I happened to look up. What I saw gave me something to think about. A saurus crane, one of my most precious specimens, was loose! Across the hatches I could see it striding along on the other side of the deck, with Lal and Nemsi (a bushy-bearded Sikh who came to be known as Dempsey) in careful and quiet pursuit. They moved slowly and silently in the wake of the valuable bird that had somehow gained its freedom. They had sense enough to know that if they made a rush for it they would only startle the big wader into flight.

Making as little noise as possible, I started for the scene. I had no intention of losing that crane. He was too fine a specimen and worth too much money.

BIRD ROPED

Never in my roping experience have I handled a lasso with more downright carefulness. My throw had to be good. If I missed, the bird would be in full flight long before I was ready for another try, and retrieving him would be a hopeless proposition.

The crane, startled by the whirr of the rope, spread out his wings—a full-grown saurus crane like this one is eight to nine feet from tip to tip—and started over the rail. By the time I had worked up sufficient momentum with the rope to let him have it, the bird was 20 feet from the ship, over the water. The whirling lariat was spinning properly and I let it fly. My aim was good. I caught the crane across one shoulder and under the wing on the other side. The fugitive dropped, a little stunned, falling against the side of the ship. He was flapping furiously as I hauled him over the rail. A hasty examination revealed that he was none the worse for his experience.

"Kidding you?" I replied, striving to get astonishment into my voice. "Don't be so darned modest, Curly. You're a wonderful teacher."

He looked at me in blank puzzlement.

"I don't know, boss," he remarked. "I still have a feeling that maybe you was only kidding me."

There is much rejoicing in the J. Frank Drake family; the Drakes's first grandchild has just arrived. Virginia Drake Lasell is the new baby, born yesterday morning in New York to the Chester H. Lasells, of New York.

Mrs. Lasell is the former Ruth Drake, who came out a few years ago. She named her young daughter after her sister, Virginia. Mrs. Drake is now in New York with her daughter.

There was a tempting display of inexpensive gifts at the annual bazar of St. Anne's Guild, held yesterday afternoon in Calvary Church parish house.

Guild Bazar

And scores of the fashionables were busy selling dolls, bric-a-brac, linens, cakes and candy and goodness knows what else. Anything that wasn't sold will be on sale again a week from today when the members will hold their usual sewing meeting.

All the tables were ever so attractive, but the doll table caught my eye. There were dolls of all sorts, and the cutest baby dolls with hand-made wardrobes. There was a display of the latest styles in dolls' dresses, too. Mrs. Harry S. Ransom was in charge of this table.

Mrs. W. C. Kirkpatrick was chairman of the baby clothes table; Mrs. William H. McNaugher, of novelties; Mrs. Charles Steinmeyer, fancy work; Mrs. Francis R. Crandall, utilities; Mrs. Arthur Little, the grab bag.

There was a tea, too, with attractive Mrs. George A. Kelly III in charge. There were chrysanthemums and other gay-colored fall flowers on the tea table, and candles.

DRESSLIKE COATS AND SUITS ARE THE SEASON'S FAVORITES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 11. — Just as dresses are trying more and more to look like coats, or suits —coats and suits themselves are trying to look more and more like dresses. Many of the new suits Paris is making right now may actually be worn as dresses. Leave off the third party, or the blouse beneath, and discard the scarf or fur, and your Paris suit will serve as a most satisfactory two-piece dress.

CHANTAL IS one of the French designers who is especially clever at this sort of thing. One of her winter successes is a suit which looks for all the world like a dress, but which is a perfectly practical suit none the less.

LIKE ALL of Chantal's clothes, this costume takes to a most original color scheme. The fabric of the suit itself gives the impression of being black, but is really a combination of red with black. The stitching, which is visible, is white, to match the white cord belt. The blouse beneath and the added scarf are clear bright yellow.

BOTH JACKET and skirt are designed on the principle of the two-piece dress. The skirt gets all its fullness from three one-sided plaits, yet hangs straight when not in motion. The jacket opens at a side fastening, under the plastron, but the opening is not visible—another touch which adds to the illusion that the costume is a dress. The blouse and the little braided scarf are both of yellow yarn.

Can a Veteran Dissipator Become Good Husband?

Will Bill wreck the only girl's life, if he marries her?

He's wondering. For 15 years he has been playing the hot spots, high, wide and handsome. Wild parties, wild women, were all he thought of outside of office hours. And the last big bust put him in the hospital, with pink elephants chasing snakes all over the place.

Then he met The Girl—and came about with a jolt. He loves her. She loves him. He wants to marry her.

"But can I make her happy, with all that behind me?" he asks.

Do you think he can? Or should he give her up—for her good?

DISAPPOINTED IN LOVE

"Dear Sally Martin—

"I've taken more than a passing interest in your column lately, hoping I'd see a problem like mine. But I haven't, so I am coming to you with it. I hope you can help me.

"I am a professional man, with no particular recognized ability; but despite my carelessness and slovenly living, I've managed to make ends meet. No very difficult job for a bachelor with two indulgent aunts.

"Fifteen years ago I was engaged to someone I thought at that time was the only girl. We were young then, and life seemed full of promise. It's happened a million time before, I suppose—she married another man. I suppose I gathered the idea from fiction or the movies. At any rate, I went in for booze and painted ladies in a big way. For 15 years that has been my game.

"Last January I went to Washington in the interest of a client, and after pulling a few ropes succeeded in getting what was desired. My share of the plunder was well over $600. I guess you know what happened then—the most ambitious bust of my moist career . . . When I regained my faculties I was in the hospital. They kept me there a few days, then sent me on my way.

A NEW INSPIRATION

"Our doctor, with the aid of one of the indulgent aunts, shipped me off for a rest cure—and there arose the present problem. She is a school teacher, reasonably good looking, 30 years old and of pleasing personality. I spent the most wonderful week of my life with her, looking for funny little restaurants, at the movies, listening to her play the piano, or walking for miles in the crisp air of late winter. When her week at the resort was up I didn't want to stay any longer, but was anxious to get back to work. I've been working hard ever since.

"My seniors at the office no longer find it necessary to send me out for a shave or a clean shirt. I actually own three suits of clothes, paid for out of my own earnings. I'm catching up on work that I've been sidestepping for years. I didn't make any firm resolutions, or take the pledge, and won't say I haven't taken a drink, because I have—but only one at a sitting, and plain ginger ale the rest of the evening.

"I will say this, however, with absolute honesty. I have not been drunk once since that week. Nor have I been buying shoes, hats or what have you for any of my former 'lady friends.' We have seen each other practically every week-end this summer, and I think she is the most perfect thing that was ever created.

WANTS ADVICE

"She is willing to marry me. The aunts are trying to push me by all sorts of subtle tactics—and I want to marry her. Yet, somehow or other, I am afraid. I am 40 and haven't come out of that 15 years unscathed. The doctors say I'm in reasonably good shape and can show marked improvement with continued good living.

"I don't expect a lot from life any more, but I'd go through the rest alone rather than wreck hers.

"What do you, or, more important still, what do your readers think along this line? I mean people who have had actual experience. Can I come out of it and make her happy? Or should I give her up?

"BILL."

How about it, folks?

Can Bill make the grade? Personally, I think he can. He's made a fine start. He's showed he can be regular. Can he keep it up? If not, why not?

Come on! Let's have your verdict!

Few in Same Line of Business Love and Marry, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

There are a good many exceptions, of course, but still comparatively few men and women in exactly the same line of work fall in love and marry.

One naturally thinks that the young business man would do well to marry his secretary who understands his business affairs so perfectly. But he is more apt to prefer some pretty girl who doesn't know one thing about it.

It is not so much that there would be professional jealousy as that there would be boredom that prevents such marriages, I think.

Romance with some one in another field has more glamour.

The happiest couples I have known are those who take a keen and sympathetic interest in each other's work, but have not the same abilities.

HEART OF A WIFE

Continuation of I.ove's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Learns More About Missing Girls

Harry Underwood stirred ever so slightly as Dr. Barnes put his last question to Rose, the maid who had brought to him the story of the two Whiney Hall girls entering the automobile. I knew what that movement meant. It was but the outward symbol of the restlessness that was consuming not only Harry, but Dicky, Lillian and myself at this questioning.

"What did he say to that?" Dr. Barnes repeated as Rose hesitated again in her tale of the comment made by her neighbor upon an occurrence he had witnessed.

"He said he knew by the cut of their jib they were Whitney Hall girls," she said, "but I don't believe they were, and I told him so. I wouldn't have said anything—you know," looking at Mrs. Barnes, "you told us never to discuss Whitney Hall affairs with anybody, but I thought because—" Her voice trailed off, and Mrs. Barnes spoke quickly, encouragingly.

"You did exactly right, Rose, this time. Thank you for coming to us so promptly."

"Would you like to ask Rose any questions?" Dr. Barnes turned toward us.

Harry Underwood was prompt in response.

"Did this man say how these girls he saw were dressed?" he asked.

"He said they wore red coats," Rose answered.

RELIEF FOR LILLIAN

"One of the first things we did," Dr. Barnes commented, "was to get a minute account of how each girl was dressed, from those of their mates who last saw them. Both girls were wearing cloth coats of Scotch plaid pattern."

"But," Lillian said, in puzzled tones, "Marion has no plaid coat. Of course, I do not know what Helena may have bought for Carolyn."

"This makes it pretty clear that the girls were not the ones Rose's neighbor saw get into the car," said Dr. Barnes. "You are sure, Rose, that he said those girls had red coats?"

"That's what he said," Rose answered, and Dr. Barnes leaned back as if satisfied on that point.

A sudden disturbing thought came to me, which was so fanciful and far fetched that I hesitated to utter it. Then a chance look at Lillian's face showed me so much relief at Dr. Barnes' pronouncement that the red-coated girls who had climbed into the stranger's car could not have been Marion and Carolyn that at this juncture I could not disturb her with a doubt of his conclusion.

"Do you mind telling me the man's name, Rose?" Harry Underwood asked gently.

The girl's eyes went affrightedly to Dr. Barnes' face.

"He'd be awful mad at me," she said, "if he thought I'd blabbed what he said up here."

"You don't understand, Rose," Mr. Underwood said. "No one of us here is going to talk to him, and he will never know that the man who will talk to him has any connection with any of us here. If you keep quiet yourself, he will never dream that you have told anyone about what you said to him. But I would like to know his name and address and where he works.

GETS ADDRESS

"Tell him, Rose," Dr. Barnes commanded.

"His name is Alfred Jenkins," Rose said reluctantly. "He works on that big dairy farm of Cooke's, and he lives next door to me."

"Thank you," Mr. Underwood said and then turned to Dr. Barnes.

"That is all I wish to ask her," he said "and I am sure the rest of us agree that she need not be bothered any longer."

We caught his cue and nodded assent when the girl, at a word from Dr. Barnes, had gone out of the room. Mrs. Barnes had followed her out, with the evident purpose of cautioning her again against speech of any sort concerning the girls' disappearance. Harry Underwood now spoke quickly, decisively.

"There's no need to question her any further. She's scared to death as it is. But you can tell me, can you not, the approximate business and home address of this Jenkins?"

"Of course," Dr. Barnes said with alacrity. "If he lives next door to Rose, the address is this." He wrote it on a small pad, tore off the paper and handed it over. "I can give you full instructions how to find the dairy. Will you pardon the curiosity that prompts a query as to how you are going to manage this without exciting the man's suspicion?"

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When sitting, don't slump. Not if you value your handsome shape, would retain it through the oncoming years. The erect position should become a habit, walking, sitting or standing. Youth is expressed in the lines of the figure, as it is expressed in the freshness of the skin. No use crashing the cosmetic counter, plying the fragrant cream, if round shoulders and a bulging tummy are in process of development.

Girls with buttered complexions which defy repeated and furious attacks of the well-ripened powder pad make a big fuss, do a lot of whining, but they have one advantage that should be a consolation to them: they won't wrinkle early. It's the dry skin that gets drawstrings in it, takes on the appearance of crepe. Excessive oil is produced by overactive sebaceous glands, which lose heart when treated with ice rubs, applications of witch hazel, rinsings with tepid water to which a few drops of simple tincture of benzoin have been added. A diet rich in fats incites glands to turn themselves into oil geysers. So cut out heavy pastries, substituting fruit and fruit juices. And don't forget to wolf down that half head of lettuce every day, so as to supply the body with elements that make for a good complexion.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Informatory Double

In the early days of Bridge, a double for a Takeout was called an Informatory Double, as it was designed to inform partner that the maker did not expect to defeat the contract undertaken, but did have cards which would justify another bid. Frequently, Doubles designed for penalties have in them the elements of information which permit the fulfilment of a contract, which would otherwise have been doomed to defeat.

An example of this type of Double is shown on the hand below, which was played recently at the Wissahickon Club in Philadelphia.

North—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

The bidding:

| 2 ♠ | Pass | 2 N T | Pass |
| 3 ♠ | Pass | 3 N T | Pass |
| 4 ♣ | Pass | 4 ♠ | Pass |
| 6 ♠ | Double (1) | Pass | Pass |
| Redouble | Pass | Pass | Pass |

1—This Double is, of course, bad, as, in fact, most Doubles in similar situations are.

When the Dummy went down, it was crystal clear to the Declarer that the hope of beating the contract was based on West holding at least four trumps to the King-Ten.

The opening lead was the club 9, upon which the Ten was played from Dummy; East covered with the Queen, and the Declarer won with the Ace. In taking stock of the hand, the Declarer could see that if East held one trump and the suits were evenly divided, the hand could be made. One round of trumps was taken by leading a low trump to the Knave in Dummy. West refused to win, and East followed suit. Now the problem facing the Declarer was the shortening of his own trump holding. The Ace of hearts was led from Dummy, and a low heart returned and trumped by the Declarer. A low club was then led by the Declarer, won with the Knave, and another low heart led and ruffed. This shortened the Declarer's trumps to the same number as held by West. Three rounds of diamonds and another round of clubs followed, leaving West with nothing in his hand but the King-Ten-Eight of trumps. Now the Declarer led the 9 of spades, which West was forced to win, but he could then do nothing but lead into South's tenace for the remaining tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION

♠ — ♡ J 10 9 8 5 ◇ K J 10 9 7 ♣ A Q 6

Answer—Yes. The honor-trick requirement for a Takeout Double can be shaded in rare cases where the supporting strength for partner's forced bid is very great.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Why not lovebirds for trimming. A charming little cloche of black velours felt has a pair of tiny green lovebirds perched high on the side back of the crown.

Always in demand is the white satin evening shoe. A new model, done in white satin on a classic T-strap design, has a scalloped edge to the white satin back. The edge is done in silver kid and the heel and vamp are of dotted white satin.

Back again come all the old fashions. A smart shop is featuring the old perfume pendant, but modernized of course. On a slender chain of marcasite is slung a big locket. This contains a tiny puff on which perfume is sprayed, with the filigree of the locket releasing the perfume.

HAPPY little girl, just bursting with pep, and she has never tasted a "tonic!"

Every child's stomach, liver, and bowels need stimulating at times, but give children something you know all about.

Follow the advice of that famous family physician who gave the world Syrup Pepsin. Stimulate the body's vital organs. Dr. Caldwell's prescription of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh herbs is a mild stimulant that keeps the system from getting sluggish.

If your youngsters don't do well at school, don't play as hard or eat as well as other children do, begin this evening with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This gentle stimulant will soon right things! The bowels will move with better regularity and thoroughness. There won't be so many sick spells or colds. You'll find it just as wonderful for adults, too, in larger spoonfuls!

Get some Syrup Pepsin; protect your household from those bilious days, frequent headaches, and that sluggish state of half-health that means the bowels need stimulating. Keep this preparation in the home to use instead of harsh cathartics that cause chronic constipation if taken too often. You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store; they have it all ready in big bottles.

Characters in Search of an Author

My betters were generous in their salutes and praises of Sam H. Harris' "Dinner at Eight" show at the Music Box. I indorsed it along with them, but I didn't gush over it. I wondered why it didn't grip me all the way through—as it did the other reviewers, and now I know why my report was only lukewarm. Too many members of that first-night audience impressed me more than any of the characters on the stage. I mean those whose sad stories I know, and whose adventures in the past few years have been far more tragic and dramatic than most plays I've seen.

That old gent, who not long ago was a great power in the moving picture industry . . . He sat near me, and I went into a mood thinking about how cruel the fates have been to him.

A year ago at the first-nights, the various cinema stars and others in the same audience would coo and drip sugary things into his ears before the first asbestos lifted. Or they would block the lobby, surrounding him as they unfolded their pleas or hard-luck tales to him, hoping all the while, of course, that he would put them back in the line-up. No other first-nighter, it seemed to me, was so popular as this man . . . He had something they wanted.

And there he sat—at that "Dinner at Eight" premiere—without one person going to the bother of coming over to inquire about his health or anything. He wasn't important any more! Banks and bankers and other swift-talkers had leveled him. He is no longer a power in his craft. Things have changed. And I had heard that day, too, how he merely sits at his desk, as a figurehead, tapping his fingers nervously on this or that, or scribbling nothings on memo pads. And that some thoughtful friend had telephoned him that day. And his secretary had written the phone caller a sweet letter saying: "It was so nice of you to phone Mr. X. Nobody ever thinks to call on him or phone him any more, and your call made him so happy" . . . When he was in power a year ago he was always too busy to answer social phone calls. And today he is a miserable and poor man. His plight, it seemed to me, was sadder than that of Conway Tearle's (in the play), a movie has-been, who fades out via the gas route.

Then, too, an aisle seat from my pew, sat a handsome producer, who not too many seasons ago rated high. There he sat with his beautiful bride, both attored in their finery, looking like ready coin. He had just come out of the hospital the day before, where he was rushed after a collapse when his last production failed after a brief run, melting his hopes. And the last penny he had! What diversion could he have found in the new show? Surely not the husband in the play whose fortune crashes, and whose heart is failing him? Witnessing his own plight, in a way, must have made his heart ache all the more. You see. Most of the members in the audience were just as dramatic as any character on that stage.

That couple peacocking down the aisle. I can't pity him because he is one of the town's foremost chumps. Every first-night he goes to he runs into the same set—all of whom know that he knows of his wife's affairs. And they titter about them, and buzz, to which she is indifferent, of course. Women like her always are. And you hear that she is plotting to divorce him, but you dismiss that—knowing how foolish it would be—for she has a mansion and everything she wants from lorgnettes to lovers, and he "puts up with it all" because he "loves her!"

The couple in the "Dinner at Eight" drama, who use each other for convenience sake, are not as spellbinding as this pair.

Event the character of Dolly Vance (Constance Collier), who was the toast of the town 20 years ago, and who is seen peddling the stocks and bonds that her former admirers gave her, wasn't as impressive as the stars in the audience, in less fortunate circumstances. They haven't bonds or valuables to peddle. Two one-time stage favorites, who were seated out front that premiere evening, would have preferred the price of the tickets to seeing the play.

Of course, a critic is assigned to cover the action on the stage, not the goings-on in the audience. Nevertheless, the show the producer put on out front was too much opposition.

The papers recently recorded the touching tale of a socially registered pair whose castles tumbled into dust overnight. The wife, though she is plotting to divorce him, because for years they haven't cared the way they once did, sold her gems, her residence, both town and country, to help him pay his debts. A grand and noble woman. I wondered what they both thought as they saw Ann Andrews of the cast wasting her husband's money, throwing parties for swanky persons and honored guests who do not show up. And if the couple out front, whose fortune dwindled until they were dispossessed, felt like yelling: "Don't! Don't! We did that!"

And other tragic figures in that attendance included a newspaperman or two or three, all of whom would tell you that their "story" was infinitely more compelling. But who doesn't think that?

And one of them, who was only intermittently arrested by the proceedings on the other side of the bulbs, is now certain that the show is a fine play, and that the authors are accurate reporters of human beings. And that he might have thought so when he hastened to his editorial rooms—if that initial audience hadn't diverted his attention and sympathy from the actors.

For, as he paralleled the characters with certain auditors as well as himself, all he could think of was: "You think you have troubles? eh. You ought to hear mine!!!"

G. Raymond Signs New Contract

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11. All that is over about Gene Raymond quitting the films and returning to Broadway. The blond leading man has signed a one-year's personal contract with Jesse Lasky, who first discovered him and sent him out to the coast.

Mr. Lasky confirmed this to me and announced that Gene's first part will be the masculine lead in "Zoo in Budapest." Sitting in the director's chair for this picture will be another Lasky protege, James Cruze.

Jesse Lasky

I find the former Paramount head very keen over his film plans for the coming year. He sees five pictures a week, looking out for promising players, and he has a sharp eye on the story and play market. Meanwhile, they are erecting a special building to house the Lasky productions at Fox.

Oh, yes; Broadway will get a brief look at Gene Raymond. He leaves here Sunday for a flying visit to New York.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE

The mail brings me an announcement card from Helen Twelvetrees and Jack Woody. They're calling the new heir Jack Bryan Woody. Gene Markey is too busy at Paramount to accompany Joan Bennett on her trip East . . . Evalyn Knapp and Don Cook are still steadies, also Esther Brodelet and William (Stage) Boyd. Both couples were at the frolics the other evening . . . A belated telephone call to George Raft discovers that he has left for New Orleans, Chicago and New York. You'll hear from his friends that George is insisting on a raise from Paramount . . . Although Weldon Heyburn lost out on that Mary Pickford lead, he's happy over effecting a reconciliation with Greta Nissen . . . Residents in Beverly Hills were amazed the other evening to see a uniformed attendant working a cash register in front of an expensive home. It was Harry Ruby's "pay-as-you-enter" party to the Baltimore Dairy Lunch Club. This organization of Hollywood congenials meets every other week at the home of a member. Alternate weeks, they're to be found at Al Levy's Tavern. Nobody makes any speeches. The club has no purpose. Its sole objects are laughs and good fellowship. And bids are becoming sought after.

Evalyn Knapp

FARRELL EXPLAINS

Charles Farrell tells me his health was the reason he walked out on a picture and got himself frowned on by Fox. All year he has been suffering from what he thought was hay fever. Now the doctors discover the trouble can be remedied by a couple of nose operations. Charlie had the first two days ago and will go to the hospital again as soon as his condition permits.

Along with this, he professes to be tired out.

"I made three pictures in a row," he explains, "and I think I'm due for a rest. You remember I voluntarily offered to do 'Tess of the Storm Country.' After that, I believe they owe me some consideration."

The affair is not much of a mad, however, and Charlie looks for it to be smoothed over any day now.

Muni Great On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"I am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," a swell photoplay despite its terrifically grim atmosphere, reveals a powerful acting performance by Paul Muni in a gripping story that draws a pathetic, realistic portrait of a man cruelly beaten down by society. It opened yesterday as the Stanley feature, with two typically correct actresses to supply the satisfying romantic triangle, Glenda Farrell, to give a steely impression of a vengeful woman scorned, and Helen Vinson, with her innate sweetness and purity, to provide a beautiful ideal in the experiences of a man to whom fate permits only a passing glimpse of heaven. All else is hell.

The chain-gang is something with which few of us are familiar, our scant knowledge of it being that gained through reading about its horrors in descriptions of how it operates in states where shackled prisoners, merely housed by the state, are sent out on contract to do work on privately owned enterprises.

AN INNOCENT VICTIM

It is to such an institution that Muni is sent, for a crime he did not commit, during roving days when he is trying to find himself after his discharge from heroic army service. The brutality in the camp to which he is committed prompts him to risk death in an attempt to flee, but he succeeds in getting away. Under an assumed name he rises to a position of importance as an engineer in another state. At the height of his career, he is betrayed by his own wife, but fights extradition successfully, finally agreeing to return voluntarily, under promise of a pardon, which is not kept. He manages a second escape but neither present nor future holds promise of rehabilitation, so he prowls, existing furtively, "A Fugitive From a Chain Gang."

CAUGHT IN STREAM

This mere skeleton of the theme will not affect your response to the stimuli of the drama, for it is picturization of the detail that excites sympathy as gradation of feeling ebb and flow in a mutual fellow-interest with a man caught in channel of cause and effect. You rebel with him, and fight with him, against the monster that grasps him, and find yourself all too futile and despairing as he leaves you to slink into the symbolic darkness of night in which he is a hunted creature.

'Golden West' In Fulton

By EDWARD W. GOSS

"The Golden West," a novel by Zane Grey, is being shown on the Fulton screen.

In making Grey's somewhat lengthy work into a picture, the Fox studios used only the more dramatic chapters, leaving out everything else. The picture, consequently, is filled with so many so-called "punch scenes" that is becomes irksome. Somebody, especially George O'Brien, playing a dual role, is always doing something heroic. Then, too, the picture attempts to cover as much ground as the story.

At the opening O'Brien is seen as the scion of a proud Southern family. He kills a man and flees to the West. He marries and takes up a homestead, but the Indians descend on his cabin one night, killing him and his wife and stealing his 2-year-old son.

A period of 20 years elapses. O'Brien is next seen in the role of a renegade leader of a band of Indians. The renegade, in infancy, was the baby the Indians stole. O'Brien's band captures a white girl, he falls in love with her and deserts his followers to return to her people.

Plays and Players By William J. Lewis

It isn't so much what they do as how they do it in spectacular scenes in revues, but in the case of Lucille Page, dancer in Earl Carroll "Vanities," coming to the Nixon next week, it is both. Miss Page set Earl back $25,000 to provide a novel setting for her dancing act. Recruited out where the movies begin, because of her dancing ability, Miss Page, our Mr. Carroll ruled, must be made a sensation. And what better for creating a sensation than something of the same kind as a setting for her act? Nothing, Mr. Vanities Man replied to himself, so he provided a dinosaur, huge replica of the prehistoric reptile, mechanically operated, to help Miss Page to make her act novel as well as skillful.

CAMAY THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

In Which a Customer Does the Work

"IT HAS BEEN a habit with me," writes Frank Horton, "to read your columns day by day. That may seem strange to you, but stranger still is the fact that I believe many of them to be true. Not so strange is the fact that I find a few of them difficult to believe.

"But now that all the strangeness has worn off, we can settle down to a story that you're going to find hard to believe. (Editor's note: Now we're getting somewhere.) It's a story that I can vouch for, because, in a remote way, I was a part of it.

"I'm a butler, Mr. Hellinger. Not the kind of a butler you see in stage productions or movies. I have never worn sideburns. And I would be fired if I ever said 'The lady awaits without, m'lord.'

"In fact, I'm a very free and easy-going butler. I get excellent food and good wages. My boss and I drink his brandy and smoke his cigars. Of course he doesn't know that I share those things with him, but that's to be expected.

"I work for the Hayes family. That's not their right name, but you don't quibble about such matters, so what's the difference? There were three of them. Old man Hayes, Mrs. Hayes. And Sonny Hayes.

"Old man Hayes parts his white hair in the middle, clips his bond coupons, and goes on a fox chase once a year. Mrs. Hayes follows the maids around all day, reads Walter Winchell avidly, and throws lawn parties for orphan asylums in the summer.

"But Sonny—Ahhh, Mr. Hellinger. Now we're getting to the story. Sonny, at the age of 18, occupied a position in life which millions of young men might have envied.

"He was the scion of a wealthy family. He had a couple of million in his own right. He had a build like a Greek god, and a personality that would make Maurice Chevalier look like a wall flower. He had everything.

"His parents wanted him to go to Yale. His aunts and uncles wanted him to attend Georgetown, Harvard and Columbia. So he promptly satisfied them all by getting put out of each university in turn and entering the next one.

"He turned out to be what one might call a party man. No. That isn't the term you use. Playboy. That's it. Sonny was a playboy.

"Broadway was his university. The night clubs were his classrooms. The pretty-pretties were his teachers. But Sonny never seemed to learn.

"His pet experiment was getting drunk. The drunker he got, the drunker he got. Liquor to him meant more than wealth. Getting sober to him was like waking up after a swell dream. He promptly got drunk all over again.

"At any rate, he burned up Broadway and himself at one and the same time. Once or twice in the three years he was away from home he came back to visit the folks. The last time he came back, they carried him in.

"Old man Hayes sent out for three sets of whiskers, and they applied stethoscopes to his heart. They shook their heads and said he stood one chance in a thousand of ever getting well again.

"Mrs. Hayes cried every time she looked at him. The boy was chalk white and he couldn't do much more than lift a hand. They couldn't get him to eat and all he wanted was liquor. More liquor.

"The doctors decided to try to build him up by giving him liquor every day in smaller doses. At the same time he would be fed plain food and placed on the sun porch every day for an airing.

"Well, it wasn't working so well until this Margie came along. She was the daughter of a family on the next estate. She was a beautiful girl. I can't describe her, except to use a phrase from an O. Henry story: 'She stopped growing, but her hair and eyes didn't.'

"The girl used to come over once in a while and chat with Mrs. Hayes about this and that. That's how she came to meet Sonny. I don't think that Margie was so much impressed by him when she met him. But he—well, his eyes opened and he smiled for the first time in weeks.

"After that he insisted that I comb his hair and shave him every morning. He started to eat a little and drink less. Margie came over more often, and the doctors said if the girl had that effect on him medical science couldn't compete with her.

"Well, Mr. Hellinger, that boy got well. I used to stand by the kitchen door and watch him on the lawn trying to walk. He had a cane and Margie to help him.

"Then, after awhile, the doctors said that he'd have to go away for a long rest. Well, Sonny balked at that. He said that the country was made for birds, and bees and flowers, but not for him. He told them he'd die on a farm.

"But they insisted. In the end, Margie got him to agree. She said that if he did as the doctors suggested, she'd marry him when he returned. Provided, of course, that he never touched another drop of liquor.

"Sonny was so crazy about that girl that he'd have promised to live on milk and eggs if she had asked. Then he went off to a farm in Canada, north of Montreal.

"He was gone six months. During that time all he did was eat, sleep and write letters to Margie. Old Man Hayes and Mrs. Hayes were tickled silly because of the forthcoming marriage. They liked the girl, and they knew that she was the salvation of their son.

"Well, he sent pictures home now and then, and I got a look at some of them. You never saw such a change in your life. He looked as he did when he was 18. He had all the youthful vigor back, and the only change I could see was that his expression was calmer. More settled.

"The doctors said that he had lived up to his promise perfectly. He hadn't touched a drop of liquor; in fact, he was dead set against drinking.

"The night before he was to come back he phoned Mrs. Hayes. She spoke to him for about three minutes, and came downstairs beaming. She gave me orders about the homecoming celebration for the next night. They were going to announce Sonny's engagement to Margie at the party.

"'I was just talking to him,' Mrs. Hayes said. 'He sounded like my old boy. I'm so happy. So very, very happy. He told me that he had learned his lesson. He would never drink again. He wants nothing to do with liquor. Oh, I'm so happy.'

"Sonny started back in the big roadster he always used. He made good time down through Canada because he was in a hurry to meet Margie and the folks again.

"As he crossed the border into the United States, a very strange thing happened, Mr. Hellinger. A man stood in front of Sonny's car waving at him. Sonny thought he wanted a lift, and kept going.

"The man fired a shot. It hit Sonny in the side of the head. The car crashed into some trees, and he was dead before a doctor arrived.

"There's irony for you, Mr. Hellinger. After all he had gone through to beat the liquor habit, Sonny was shot by a revenue man who thought he was smuggling liquor into this country!"

This 'Actor' Outgrew His Part

A new problem in talking picture production arose at the RKO Radio lot in connection with "King Kong," the film which the studio has been making for more than a year. A Negro infant, used in early sequences months ago, was recalled for additional scenes. He had outgrown the part! Los Angeles is now being combed for a suitable substitute.

Hollywood Elevates New Cinderella

Another Cinderella has caught her breath in Hollywood and fingered a brand new featured player's contract to see if it were real. She is Patricia Farley, who won the notice of Paramount studio officials because of the way she exchanged flip repartee with Mae West while playing the title role of a hat check girl in "Night After Night."

How Do Nurses Manage?

The strenuous duties of the trained nurse permit little thought of her own physical condition or feelings. There can be no giving-in to monthly pains! That is the reason why so many nurses use Midol. They know it blocks all possibility of such pain for hours—and nurses know that it is not a narcotic and so is quite safe to take at this critical time.

Midol is not merely a measure of relief—it does not interfere with regular flow. All pain subsides in seven minutes! All dread of your monthly sickness ends with this happy discovery. Any drug store. Ask simply for Midol.

Substances in Grapes Act As Blood Purifier

Since This Food Contains a Large Amount of Grape Sugar, It Is Regarded as an Energy Food.

United States Senator From New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

It is interesting to learn about the increased production of grapes in the last 10 years. The Department of Agriculture estimates that this year's crop of grapes will exceed that of any preceding year.

On a recent tour of Northern New York State, I was impressed by the beauty of the vineyards. This section of the state has been aptly described as "the Rhine of America."

Grapes are grown throughout the country, but are most extensively cultivated in New York, California, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey and Ohio. There are many varieties of grapes. The grapes grown in California come from imported stock. They are sweeter and larger than the native American grape.

Some of the best-known varieties are white muscat, flame tokay, green malaga and emperor. In the East the most popular are the Concord, the Delaware, the Niagara and the Catawba. The eastern grapes make up more than 90 per cent of all the grapes on the market.

STIMULATE APPETITE

The quality of the grape is greatly influenced by location, soil, climate and temperature. A fruit grown in one locality differs markedly from that grown in another. In general, grapes are composed of about 80 per cent water, 16 per cent sugar and the remainder is made up of ash, fat, fiber and proteins. Some grapes contain as much as 35 per cent sugar.

Due to its pleasant and sweet taste, grapes stimulate the appetite. In addition, they contain important vitamins and mineral substances. Small amounts of vitamins A, B and C are found in grapes. Lime, potash and iron salts are found in this fruit. These mineral substances are excellent tonics and blood purifiers.

ENERGY FOOD

Since grapes contain a large amount of grape sugar, they are regarded as an energy food. It is estimated that a bunch of grapes supplies approximately 100 calories. Malic, citric and tartaric acids are found in grapes. Cream of tartar is made from the tartaric acid. The laxative and diuretic action of grapes is traced to the malic and citric acid content.

In former years, grapes were indeed a luxury. They were seen only on the tables of the rich and at special festivities. Today this delicious fruit is within the reach of everyone. Improvements in transportation, refrigeration and cultivation have made the grape one of the most popular of all fruits.

School Card Party Slated Tomorrow

Bridge, '500' and euchre will be played at a card party tomorrow in the St. Joseph School of Practical and Fine Arts, in St. Peter and Paul School, Flavel street. Paintings by the students will be on display.

RECIPES BY PRUDENCE PENNY

DO YOUR YOUNG things scream at spinach, cringe at carrots and other such foods? Does your family seem to feel that vitamins disagree with them and that "wholesome" is just a synonym for "horrid?" Even if they do, don't despair. There is a way to satisfy your cry of "Oh, for a little peace!"

Our grandmothers forced the foods we needed right down our throats. Our mothers pleaded and wheedled and got tears for their pains. But we, in this day of Angelo Patri and other child-training experts, dare not risk complexes by employing either method. The net result has been the reason why mothers grow gray.

But there are some foods the persnickety young things like, that are good for them, too. So, to keep peace in your household, serve them, and let the despised dishes take a back seat. One of the youngsters' prime favorites is dates. They think they are candy, and you can let them continue to think so while they are consuming the vitamins and the body-building minerals the dates contain. With milk, dates are a perfectly balanced meal; when you buy either, buy the pasteurized kind.

And now that Thanksgiving is so near, there is a recipe for pumpkin and one for cranberry pie to tell you about, but first here are some foods to tempt children's appetites.

ENERGY SALAD—4 large bananas, ¾ cup peanuts, ¼ package pasteurized dates, mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing.

Remove the stringy portion from the outside of the bananas, cut them in thirds lengthwise. Roll each cylinder in dressing, then dip into the chopped peanuts. Place two cylinders in a bed of lettuce on an individual salad plate and garnish with strips of dates. Pass additional dressing. Six servings.

HYGEIA PUDDING—½ cup uncooked rice, ⅔ cup brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ package pasteurized dates, 1 quart milk.

Wash rice. Pit dates or use ready-pitted variety. Cut with wet scissors into lengthwise slices. Place all ingredients in a buttered baking dish. Bake for 2 to 3 hours in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit). Stir the pudding every 15 minutes during the first hour so that a hard crust will not form. Serve hot with plain cream or hard sauce or very cold in individual dishes with whipped cream. Six servings.

HEALTH BREAD—2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup bran, 4 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 cup milk, ½ package pasteurized dates, 1 egg.

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Add the bran. Add sliced dates and well beaten egg to the milk; and then stir these materials into the dry ingredients. Pour batter into a well oiled loaf pan. Bake in a very moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for one hour. One loaf.

AFTER SCHOOL SPREAD—2 cups (½ package) pasteurized dates, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-3 cup orange juice, 1 tablespoon honey.

Place all ingredients in a saucepan and cook over low heat until a thick paste is formed. Stir the mixture frequently to prevent burning. Cool and spread between graham crackers, vanilla wafers or slices of buttered bread. This recipe will be sufficient to cover two dozen graham crackers.

CRANBERRY PIE—Here is a delicious pie that will taste so good to you if you like cranberries even a little bit. This sort of a dessert will provide a very happy change from what we have been eating for the past few summer months.

Delicious, flaky pie crust, 1 quart of cranberries, 2 cups of sugar, 2 tablespoons of flour, 3 tablespoons of water, ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 tablespoon of melted

HARRIMAN CITES SLUMP CURES

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11.—(INS.)—Five "cures" for depression were prescribed by Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and New England industrialist. Harriman outlined his remedies in an address before the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

The cures were: 1—Regulating employment by spreading work; 2—unshackling business by modifying restrictive laws; 3—evolving a "really honest" dollar; 4—reducing the cost of government, and 5—restoring agriculture to a "self-respecting and profitable basis."

butter, 1 small box of marshmallows.

Line a medium-sized pie plate with pie crust. Finish around the edge as you would for a csutard pie. Then chop the cranberries and mix them with the sugar and flour that has been well blended together. Add the water and salt to chopped cranberries and when thoroughly mixed turn into the pie plate lined with pie crust. Arrange strips of pie crust criss-cross over the top and bake pie in moderately hot oven from 25 to 35 minutes. Take pie from oven and put a whole marshmallow in each opening between the strips of crust and then place under your broiler only long enough to just brown the marshmallows

PUMPKIN TARTS—These little pumpkin tarts are especially nice to serve with one of your pre-winter dinners some night in the near future. 1½ cups of canned or steamed, trained pumpkin, ½ cup of sugar, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons of molasses, 1 level teaspoon of ginger, ½ teaspoon of ground nutmeg, 1 level teaspoon of ground cinnamon, a pinch of salt, 2 tablespoons of melted butter, 1 cup of rich milk.

Mix the pumpkin and the sugar together. Then add the slightly beaten eggs and stir well. Mix in the molasses, spices, salt, melted butter and the milk. Stir until thoroughly blended. Then pour mixture into small tins which have been lined with delicious pastry and bake for about 20 or 25 minutes. Bake in a hot oven for a few minutes at first so as to set the rim (the crust). Then decrease heat and bake slowly until firm. This should take 20 or 25 minutes as mentioned above.

THIS IS THE WAY YOU MAKE IT: To 4 tablespoons of cornmeal add 1 cup of water, gradually, and mix well. Then stir this mixture into 2 cups of scalded milk and add ½ cup of sugar, ½ cup of molasses, 2 beaten eggs, ½ teaspoon of ginger, ½ teaspoon of salt and 1 teaspoon of cinnamon. When thoroughly mixed turn into a well-buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for one-half hour. Then pour in ½ cup of cold milk and bake in a pan of hot water without stirring for two hours.

CHEESE AND EGG SCRAMBLE—Here's a delightful luncheon or late supper dish, which can be made at the table as easily as in the kitchen—½ cup grated cheese, 4 eggs, ⅓ cup chopped onions, 3 tablespoons butter, ⅓ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Melt the butter in pan on top of electric grill or on electric range. Add chopped onions and cook covered, until onions are transparent, but not brown.

Beat the eggs well and add to them the milk, seasonings and cheese. Pour this mixture over the onions and stir with a fork until the mixture is firm. Serve on hot buttered toast, and accompany with more toast.

CRANBERRY JELLY.

Cook cranberries until soft, with 3 cups of water for each 8 cups of berries. Strain the juice through a jelly bag. Measure juice and heat to boiling point. Add 1 cup sugar for each 2 cups juice; stir until sugar is dissolved; boil briskly for 5 minutes. Pour into glass tumblers, or crockery molds, and cover with paraffin.

BURNT CREAM.

This is a French recipe, and in France a cream is spoken of when a custard is meant. However, perhaps cream is the better name, for it conjures up visions of a velvety, smooth, luscious dessert.

One third cup sugar, ¾ cup boiling water; 4 egg yolks; 1 pint milk; 1 tablespon flour; 2 tablespoons pistachio nuts or almonds. Small piece of lemon rind flavoring.

Heat 1-3 cup sugar in a frying pan until it is of a light caramel color. Add the boiling water and stir constantly, cooking until it becomes thick syrup.

Scald the smilk, reserving 3 tablespoons of it to mix with the flour. Add the flour, mixed to a smooth paste with the milk, to the beaten egg yolks; then add the scalded milk slowly, stirring constantly. Add the caramel syrup gradually, the bit of lemon rind, the nuts which have been ground to a paste, and cook the whole over hot water, stirring it constantly until it thickens. Omit the

STUFFED CABBAGE—Pick out a medium-sized cabbage. Wash it carefully and steam it or boil it until it is partly tender. Then turn the cabbage upside down and drain it.

While cabbage is draining make the following: To 1 cup of any left over meat ground finely add 1 cup of soaked bread crumbs, 1 medium-sized onion, 3 tablespoons of chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon of thyme, 1 clove of garlic (all of which should be finely chopped); ½ teaspoon of salt, and ⅛ teaspoon of black pepper.

When cabbage is well drained turn the leaves back carefully and arrange the filling between. Make a thin circle of thin strips of bacon around the outside of the cabbage. The bacon can be fastened easily by means of wooden toothpicks. Tie cabbage then with a fine string to keep it together while cooking.

Put cabbage in steamer, add a small bag of soup herbs made of 1 teaspoon thyme, 1 teaspoon of marjoram, 1 teaspoon of leaf basil and cook slowly until cabbage has become tender. Sprinkle with paprika and serve.

SUGAR CINNAMON CAKES—1 cake compressed yeast, ¼ cup water, lukewarm; 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 2 cups milk, lukewarm; 5 tablespoons fat, 6 cups flour.

Crumble yeast and add water and sugar. Mix until creamy. Add salt, egg, milk, fat and one-half the flour. Beat three minutes. Add rest of flour and knead until soft and elastic. If the dough is too sticky to handle, it requires a little more flour—about ½ cup. Place dough in greased bowl and cover. Set in warm place and let stand until it has doubled in bulk. Roll out dough on a floured board until 1-3 inch thick. Add following sugar mixture:

One and one-half cups dark brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 3 tablespoons soft butter.

Mix 1 cup of sugar with cinnamon. Spread butter on dough and sprinkle with sugar mixture. Roll up tightly like jelly roll, 1½ inches thick. Cut off ½-inch pieces. Sprinkle rest of sugar in greased shallow pan. Add cinnamon rolls, flat side up, side by side. Let rise until dough has doubled in bulk. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

ROAST DUCKLING—Wash the duckling and wipe dry inside and outside. Cut off the neck. Fill the duckling with hot stuffing, sew or skewer the openings, and tie or skewer the wings and legs close to the body. Rub the duckling with salt, pepper and flour, and flour, and place it on its back in an open roasting pan, preferably on a rack. Start the roasting in a hot oven (450-500 degrees Fahrenheit). When the duck is brown reduce the heat to moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and cook until tender. Baste often with the drippings in the pan, but do not add water. Allow about 25 minutes to the pound.

COOKED SPAGHETTI WITH SAUSAGES AND APPLE RINGS—Brown 1 pound sausage in a frying pan and allow to cook slowly until thoroughly done. Remove from frying pan and pour off excess fat. Add 2 tablespoons butter and when hot add 3 large cooking apples, which have been cored and cut into ½ inch slices. When brown on one side, turn, sprinkle very generously with sugar and cook slowly until tender, which will require only a few minutes. Heat one 21-ounce can cooked spaghetti, heap in center of hot platter and surround with sausage and apple rings.

CASSEROLE OF MEAT AND SPAGHETTI—Chop 1 medium onion and 1 medium green pepper finely and cook in frying pan with butter until slightly brown. Add 1 pound ground beef, mix thoroughly and cook until brown. Season with salt and pepper, add one 21-ounce can cooked spaghetti and ¼ cup water, and pour into casserole. Cover with buttered and crumbled rice flakes and brown in a moderate oven (about 20 minutes).

APPLESAUCE CAKE—It should be a big virtue of applesauce cake that it keeps so well. But it tastes so good, I've never known anyone to keep it very long!

Here's how to prove this for yourself. Cream together thoroughly ½ cup shortening and 1 cup light brown sugar. Break into this 1 whole egg, and beat the egg into the mixture thoroughly. Then mix 1 teaspoon soda with 1½ cups of thick, unsweetened applesauce (first put through strainer). Measure 2 cups of sifted flour. Take out 2 tablespoons of it to mix with ½ cup seedless raisins and ½ cup chopped nut meats. Mix into the rest of the flour 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon nutmeg and ¼ teaspoon salt.

Add the applesauce to the creamed sugar and shortening alternately with the sifted dry ingredients.

Last, add the floured nuts and raisins.

Turn this into a cake pan about 9 inches square. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 45 minutes.

APPLE DUMPLINGS—As for baked apple dumplings, most men put them right on a par with good apple pie, for real eating pleasure. Here's a recipe that shows how to have them just that good.

Combine 2 cups sifted flour with 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Mix in 5 tablespoons shortening and ¾ cup milk just as you do for baking powder biscuits.

Roll this dough out ¼ inch thick, and cut in 5-inch squares. On each square place a tart, juicy apple that has been peeled and cored. Then fill the apple centers with a mixture made from 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon and 4 tablespoons water. Fold the edge of the dough up around apples and pinch together. Place dumplings in a greased baking pan, brush them with 1 tablespoon melted butter, and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) till apples are tender (from 30 to 40 minutes).

Meanwhile make an old-fashioned sauce by boiling up apple peelings with 1½ cups water. Remove the peelings. Sweeten juice to taste and flavor with cinnamon, nutmeg and lemon juice. Thicken it with 1 tablespoon cornstarch rubbed smooth in a little cold water. Serve the sauce hot, around the dumplings and top them with a spoon of sauce.

DUTCH OR GERMAN APPLE CAKE—Dutch or German apple cake is one of the most popular of all these desserts. And in one of its easiest forms it's made as follows:

First combine and silft together 2 cups sifted flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup sugar. Cut into this mixture 4 tablespoons of shortening. Then combine 1 egg (well beaten) with 2-3 cup milk. Stir this into the first mixture. Then spread it evenly about ¾ inch thick in a greased round or square cake pan.

Next (peel and core 4 or 5 tart, juicy apples (depending on size). Cut them into eights. Press these (thin edge down) into the dough, so as to cover it in overlapping rows. Then pour over the top of the cake 2 tablespoons melted butter, and sprinkle with 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon (mixed). Bake in a hot oven (about 400 degrees

CHOCOLATE MACAROONS—1 cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 1 can southern style cocoanut, 1½ squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Combine sugar and salt. Fold gradually into egg whites. Fold in coconut, chocolate, and vanilla. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet. Bake in slow oven (275 degree F.) 20 minutes. Makes 2 dozen macaroons.

COCOANUT DROP COOKIES—¾ cup sifted cake flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter or other shortening, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg well beaten, 1 tablespoon milk, 1 cup shredded cocoanut.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg, mixing well. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add cocoanut. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet. Bake in hot oven (400 degree F.), 4 to 5 minutes. Makes 2 dozen cookies.

MAPLE NUT CAKE—To make it, substitute light brown sugar for the granulated sugar in the recipe for Standard Cake. Chop 1 cupful walnut or pecan meats, flour them lightly and add just before folding in the egg whites. Bake as for Standard Cake. Spread with maple icing.

For a fragrant Spice Cake sift the following spices with the dry ingredients: 2 teaspoonfuls cinnamon, 1 teaspoonful each of allspice and nutmeg and ½ teaspoonful powdered cloves. Mix and bake as for Standard Cake. Spread with mocha icing.

For Spanish Cake, sift 1 tablespoonful of cinnamon with the dry ingredients and proceed as for Standard Cake.

FUDGE FROSTING—Cook together 2 cupfuls sugar, 1 cupful milk, 2 squares of cooking chocolate, and ½ teaspoonful salt, stirring until sugar is melted. Boil without stirring to 240 degrees F. or the soft ball stage. Drop in 2 tablespoonfuls butter. Let stand until nearly cool. Beat until mixture holds shape. Spread on cake.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING—Melt 2 squares cooking chocolate and 1 tablespoonful butter over hot water. Blend with ½ cupful condensed milk and 1 teaspoonful vanilla. Beat until thick enough to hold shape. Spread on cake.

CAPE COD CANAPES (SWEET)—Cut mold of canned cranberry sauce (use the strained variety, which comes in 7-ounce cans) into quarter-inch slices. Cut thin slices of day-old bread into rounds with cutter or top of a can. Spread the bread with softened cream cheese. Place a disc of the cranberry sauce on each round and pile cream cheese around the edges, using a fork or pastry tube.

emergency dessert just originated by a staff of home economists, called "Treasure Islands." For six servings of the delicate minute-saver, cut 6 slices of sponge cake (purchased variety if desired) into half-inch slices, and then, if preferred, into rounds. Beat two egg whites with a fourth teaspoon of salt, until stiff, then beat in two tablespoons of confectioners' sugar. Fold in a half cup of pasteurized dates, pitted and finely cut. Sprinkle with chopped nutmeats (a fourth cup) if desired. Then pile this mixture on the sponge cake slices and bake in a slow oven until meringue is brown (about 15 minutes). Serve warm or cold.

In the last few years, home economists, delving into the unusual, have discovered almost untouched fields in the realms of cooked cucumbers.

Housewives looking for "something different" to serve will find in the following recipes many delicious dishes for almost any occasion.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS

Select 3 or 4 medium size cucumbers, allowing ½ cucumber cut lengthwise for each serving.

Pare and cut in two and scoop out inside, saving pulp.

Salt shells lightly and set in buttered pan, close together.

Season with 1 tablespoon tomato ketchup, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, a little paprika, and ½ teaspoon sugar.

Heat 1 cup milk and thicken with 1 tablespoon flour and 2 tablespoons butter.

Add to mixture and fill cucumber shells.

Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes.

Serve with cheese and hot rolls as an entree or at luncheon.

FRIED CUCUMBERS

Peel medium-sized cucumbers, but do not slice.

Drop into boiling milk and water which is seasoned with onion juice.

Drain and when cold slice about ½ inch thick.

Dip in beaten egg—then crumbs, fry in deep hot fat, drain and serve with a border of mashed potato.

Cucumbers may also be fried uncooked.

They are cut in ½-inch slices, dipped in flour or egg and crumbs, and fried in deep fat.

CREAMED CUCUMBERS

3 medium sized cucumbers.
1 tablespoon butter.
3 sweet peppers.
Salt and Pepper.
White sauce.

Peel and slice the cucumbers and mince peppers very fine.

Let cucumbers stand in ice water 30 minutes; drain, place in pan with peppers, cover with boiling water, and add seasoning to taste.

Boil 20 minutes, drain, place on buttered toast and pour white sauce over them.

CUCUMBERS WITH BROWN SAUCE

4 large cucumbers.
Salt and pepper.
Flour.
Brown stock or gravy.

Peel cucumbers, halve them first lengthwise and then cut them crosswise; remove seeds and season.

Roll in flour and fry in hot drippings until brown.

Remove to saucepan, pour over them some brown stock or gravy thickened with flour.

Add peppers and simmer 20 minutes.

Serve on toast, pouring sauce over them.

CRANBERRY SHORTCAKE

2 cups flour.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
1 teaspoon salt.
2½ tablespoons shortening.
1 cup milk or water.
Cranberry sauce.
1 to 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Sift flour, salt and baking powder together; cut in shortening with knife; add liquid.

Roll on slightly floured board; cut to make two layers for cake pans or individual portions.

Place one layer in pan, spread with melted butter; cover with other layer and bake in hot oven 15 to 20 minutes.

Separate.

While hot, place cranberry sauce between and on top.

Serve hot with either plain or whipped cream.

CRANBERRY SAUCE ROLL

3 eggs.
1 cup sugar.
3 tablespoons cold water.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 cup flour.
½ teaspoon vanilla.

Beat eggs and sugar till quite thick; add water; then flour, salt and baking powder, sifted together twice.

Line a shallow pan with greased paper; pour in the batter evenly; and bake in a quick oven about 12 minutes.

Turn out onto a cloth or paper sprinkled with sugar; tear off the paper and spread with warm cranberry sauce or jelly.

Roll up quickly and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

ASPARAGUS SPANISH

Heat 1 can California canned asparagus tips in own liquid and drain.

Cut French rolls in half lengthwise and toast slightly on both sides.

Brush generously with melted butter, remove to hot serving platter, place 4 asparagus tips on each and dress with sauce made as follows: in frying pan melt 3 tablespoons butter and add to it 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups cooked tomatoes, 1 teaspoon onion juice.

Simmer until slightly thickened, stirring constantly.

Add ¾ cup of grated cheese, a few grains of cayenne and 1 tablespoon of minced parsley.

Pour over the asparagus and garnish with a little of the cheese which has been reserved for this purpose.

OLD-FASHIONED CRANBERRY PIE

ALL INGREDIENTS SHOWN

Here is a delicious pie that will taste so good to you if you like cranberries even a little bit. This sort of a desert will provide a very happy change from what we have been eating for the past few months.

INGREDIENTS:

Delicious, flaky pie crust
1 quart of cranberries
2 cups of sugar
2 tablespoons of flour
3 tablespoons of water
⅛ teaspoon of salt
1 tablespoon of melted butter
1 small box of marshmallows.

ROLLING OUT THE PIE CRUST

TURNING THE MIXTURE

DIRECTIONS—Line a medium-sized pie plate with pie crust. Finish around the edge as you would for a custard pie. Then chop the cranberries and mix them with the sugar and flour that has been well blended together. Add the water and salt to chopped cranberries and when thoroughly mixed turn into the pie plate lined with pie crust criss-cross over the top and bake pie in moderately hot oven from 25 to 35 minutes. Take pie from oven and put a whole marshmallow in each opening between the strips of crust and then place under your broiler only long enough to just brown the marshmallows lightly.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Managers Grown Here. Bush Gets Fourth Club. Hard Job for Panthers. Coaches Fired Quickly. Night Ball Loses Favor. Ice Goalies Southpaws.

SEVEN OF SIXTEEN PILOTS EX-BUCS

THE NAMING OF Donie Bush to manage the Cincinnati Reds next season makes Pittsburgh stand out more prominently than ever as a breeding place of major league baseball pilots. Bush never was a Pittsburgh player, but he managed here for two and a half seasons, and his appointment gives a Pirate complexion to almost 50 per cent of the present managerial array in the big shows. Of the 16 skippers in the two major leagues, no fewer than seven came out of the Buccaneer school.

Donie Bush

George Gibson himself was a Pirate player originally. Twice he went away and twice he came back to become manager of the locals. Corsair players, too, were Charley Grimm, of the champion Cubs; Max Carey, of the Dodgers, and Bill McKechnie, of the Braves. With Bush now added, therefore, five of the eight National League generals are former Pirate figures. In the American League, Connie Mack, commander of the A's, is an ex-Pittsburgh player and manager, and Joe Cronin, new helmsman of the Senators, also wore Picaroon spangles. No other club ever made such a record for production of pilots serving at one time.

THIS IS BUSH'S fourth managerial appointment in the majors. His previous charges were the Senators, Reds and White Sox. He also managed Indianapolis and Minneapolis, and during all his years of leadership failed only twice to finish in the first division. This year he won the first pennant Minneapolis had known since 1915.

Donie thus equals the record of Ned Hanlon, Clark Griffith and George Stallings, who managed four clubs in the present two major leagues. Only Pat Donovan went as high as five. The opinion is general that Sidney Weil made a good selection in picking Bush, and that Donie will speedily put enough life into that club to get it out of the cellar.

THE PANTHER FOOTBALLERS can't afford to do anything less than their best in Lincoln tomorrow. The Cornhuskers always are big and tough, are stronger than that narrow 14-to-13 victory over Iowa last Saturday would indicate, and if the Sutherlands aren't just right they may get a disagreeable surprise.

Beating the Huskers on their own field is always a task. In three games out there, Pitt, though never beaten, has scored only two touchdowns. Tomorrow's game threatens trouble all the way. The Panthers look good enough to win, but they may have to turn on the power to do so.

PUNTS AND PASSES: Ken Fields, Army star, is first captain of the Corps of Cadets and No. 1 in scholastic rating in the senior class. Better things may be in store for Yale in 1933, as the present freshman team is reported the best in years. James Navocivich, a Polish prep school player in Sheridan, Wyo., can hit a three-foot circle with a forward pass six times out of 10 at 60 yards. In a game against Exeter, Bernard Alexs, Worcester Academy halfback, ran back two successive touchdowns 80 and 75 yards for touchdowns, during the final five minutes of play. Aaron Rosenberg, of Southern California, who is about as Irish as President von Hindenburg, goes by the nickname of "Murphy." Boston College has not defeated Villanova since 1926.

John J. McEwan

COACHES OF COLLEGE football teams are not only being fired in unusual numbers, but it's being done in a hurry. The custom once was to wait until a contract had expired, or at least until the end of a season, but mentors now are losing their jobs overnight. Capt. John J. McEwan, suspended at Holy Cross and supplanted by Arthur Corcoran, is the fourth to be ousted during the progress of the campaign.

Tommy Mills at Georgetown, Bill Hargiss at Kansas and Dr. H. J. Parker at College of the City of New York preceded him in getting the gate between games. It indicates a flock of changes at the season's end. McEwan, playing first at Minnesota, was all-America center at West Point in 1914. Later he coached Army and Oregon.

WHETHER OR NOT they are still undefeated when they meet Notre Dame in Los Angeles on December 10, the Trojans mean to be well prepared for the Irish. They will have scouted the South Benders in four consecutive games, hoping to repeat their victory of last year, which was only their second in six meetings.

Aubrey Devine, all-America quarterback at Iowa in 1921 and now assistant coach at Southern California, is on his annual excursion to learn all he can about Notre Dame plays and players. He watched the Irish against Kansas in Lawrence last Saturday and will stay right on their trail while they are playing Northwestern tomorrow in South Bend, Navy in Cleveland and Army in New York.

THE PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE is getting ready to chuck night baseball out the window. When the magnates meet in San Francisco on November 21 a proposal to eliminate the nocturnal games, or at least to limit them to one or two per week, will be made by President William Lane, of the Hollywood club, and he is said to have sufficient backing to assure the success of the movement. Lane says it was only because of its being a novelty that night baseball proved profitable when introduced on the coast two years ago, and now it is rapidly going the way of the Tom Thumb golf courses. The 1932 season was the poorest in a decade. Paid attendance in the league was only 994,501, a drop of almost 50 per cent since 1929, when the gates totaled 1,924,183. 457,000.

LANE OFFERS SEVERAL reasons why, in his opinion, night ball ought to be abandoned. One is that the public doesn't like it now that the novelty has worn off, and another is that players cannot get in shape, nor keep in condition, playing nocturnal games. Besides, he argues, big league scouts won't look at young players developed under the floodlights, thereby cutting off the sale of promising athletes.

In addition, the night games involve extra expense. Installation of the lighting system cost the Wrigley interests $45,000 in Los Angeles and each of the other clubs paid out from $10,000 to $20,000. The annual upkeep exceeds $3,000 per club.

NOBODY HAS EVER explained satisfactorily just why, and possibly you've never noticed it, but it's a peculiar fact that goalkeepers in hockey are left-handed. Perhaps youngsters aspiring to that position start out by studying some favorite goalie of experience.

Charley Gardiner

THERE ARE ONLY two of them in all the ranks of professional hockey. They hail from the same city, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and one became a right-hander merely because he patterned himself after the other. The only right-hand major league goalie is Charley Gardiner, of the Chicago Blackhawks, rated the best in the game. The second is John Clark, of the Detroit Olympics in the International League. Ever since he was a kid with a midget team, Clark has been watching Gardiner play and became a right-hander merely because he copied the style of his ideal. Gardiner is one of the few pro hockey players born outside North America. He is a native of Edinburgh, Scotland.

PITT 'SECONDS' TO OPEN WITH 'HUSKERS

By JESS CARVER

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 11.—Greeted by snow and intense cold, the University of Pittsburgh's undefeated Golden Panthers, who tomorrow meet Nebraska's not so husky Cornhuskers in Lincoln, made their fourth stopoff in Omaha today.

Due to the fervor with which Nebraska fans regard their football it is not considered safe to invade the immediate vicinity of the Husker Stadium the night or day before the game. Torchlight parades and all-night carousals by rabid home rooters are hardly conducive to the sleep needed by the college heroes; so invading teams stop off here in Omaha, where things are more quiet and where the zero hour may be spent in rest and meditation, at least the former.

The Panthers rolled in here this morning over the Burlington route from Chicago, where yesterday was spent. Everything is under control, even the appetites of the tackles. For the peace of mind of the folks back home, let it be reported that Pitt is prepping for this game in all seriousness.

JOCK'S BOYS SERIOUS

Last year's easy 40-0 victory has been put out of mind; the lesson taught Notre Dame has been taken to heart by the teachers themselves and the team is going out there tomorrow determined to give the Huskers a whipping.

Ted Dailey, right end, is the only Panther giving Coach Sutherland and Dr. Ralph Shanor, team physician, some concern. An injury which Ted sustained in the Penn game last Saturday has failed to respond to treatment, but it is likely that he will see considerable action.

Today's drill here will be somewhat on the order of yesterday's at Chicago. The second eleven, so called, with Capt. Paul Reider in at right halfback, will again be the recipient of the greater part of the coaches' attention. It is this eleven that figures to start tomorrow.

The Pitt aerial game is due for some polishing today. If the weather breaks, and it is not too cold, the Panthers may be expected to take to the air against the rather stolid Huskers.

Nebraska will give any team's running game trouble, but so far, all the westerners' opponents have been able to riddle their forward-passing defense.

HUSKERS VENGEFUL

Nebraska is set for this scrap. In has been pointing for the game since about 5 o'clock last Thanksgiving Day afternoon, after the Panthers of 1931 had crushed the Huskers in Pittsburgh. That trimming, one of the worst ever assimilated by a Nebraska team, stung to the very quick; indeed, it was taken as a personal affront by Coach Dana Bible, who had sworn to gain revenge. Nebraska would rather beat Pitt tomorrow than any other team on the schedule.

The bruised and battered Pitt varsity, which has come through four hard games in a row, against Army, Ohio State, Notre Dame and Penn, needs rest and will get it tomorrow as long as the second eleven can hold off the attack of the home boys.

GREAT SECOND TEAM

This second eleven would grace with honor the campus of most any college in the land, and is perfectly capable, or should be, of winning tomorrow's game, without any strenuous aid from the regulars. It will have Rooker and Timmons at the terminals; Meredith and Hoel at the tackles; Ormiston and Seigal at the guards; Shotwell at center; Mungas at quarter; Matesic and Capt. Reider at the halves, and Weisenbaugh at fullback.

Nebraska's hopes for a victory are being pinned on the prospective doings of four star players, Steve Hokuf, end; Bob Ely, center, and Masterson and Sauer, backs.

A victory tomorrow for Pitt, now the pace-setter in the race for both National and Eastern championship honors, will go far to secure the possession of the Pittsburghers at the top of this year's inter-collegiate gridiron heap. It will mark the seventh time Pitt and Nebraska have clashed, Pitt winning three, tying two and losing one of the series.

The Tipoff

The hats of the football world should be doffed to Paul (Bulldog) Reider, Pitt's peppery little captain. The Bulldog has proven beyond a question of a doubt that he can "take it" and come back. He's done something that proves him to be a man in every sense of the word. The Bulldog is ready to go again and when he goes . . . clear the tracks—beware—get out from under—he'll go to town.

Reider began the present season a much publicized young man. He was touted as a potential All-American even before the season rolled around. He was expected to be the spark-plug of the Pitt team; the big shot. Paul was on the spot.

But things went wrong for the little fellow right from the start. He was injured in the setup opener with Ohio Northern and apparently never fully recovered. Then he became careless with his class work. His work against Ohio State and Notre Dame was nothing over which to rave; in fact, he played only a

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE BATTLE OF THE ARMISTICE—The Armistice was signed at 5 a. m. on the morning of November 11, 1918, but the actual cessation of hostilities was ordered for 11 a. m. During the intervening six hours the troops in the front line were kept in ignorance of the accomplished signing of the Armistice, and warfare continued to the fateful stroke of 11, swelling the total casualties by several thousand. The Germans claim to have lost an additional 1,000 men in that futile battle after the Armistice. No layman ever could rid himself of the conviction that here at least the interests of humanity would have been better served if the cessation of hostilities had taken immediate effect, instead of being deferred for another calamitous six-hour stretch. THE MOST TRIVIAL CAUSE OF A WAR—Charles Gustaf (X), of Sweden, no sooner had ascended the throne of Sweden (1654) than he decided to declare war on Poland. The declaration of war, which nearly destroyed Poland, and on which the King himself had a narrow escape from death, was predicated upon the trivial fact that in a communication addressed by the Polish chancellor to the young Swedish King the former had employed only two "etc." after the enumeration of the King's titles, instead of three "etc.," which Charles Gustaf thought to be due him. The war lasted for six years and cost the lives of at least 500,000 men.

LOCAL BILLIARD STAR WINS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Joe Chamaco, of New York, went into a tie with Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, for the lead in the Eastern sectional three-cushion billiard tournament at Dwyer's last night.

Chamaco handed James Beecher, of Buffalo, his sixth successive defeat, 50 to 37 in 53 innings. Chamaco's high run was seven; Beecher's three. It was Chamaco's third victory in four starts.

Scoville, earlier in the day, had beaten Beecher, 50 to 47 in 42 innings. In the other match, William Greenwood, of Pittsburgh, defeated Kinrey Matsuyama, of Japan, 50 to 47. Matsuyama and Greenwood now are tied for third place with three victories and two defeats.

TIFF DENTON BEATEN

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, suffered his first defeat in six games in the sectional three-cushion billiard tournament here last night, Tex Harper, of Denver, winning, 50 to 45 in 58 innings. Denton, however, continued in first place with Bud Westhus, of St. Louis, second.

COCHRAN LEADER

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—John Fitzpatrick, of Seattle, dropped from among the undefeated players in the Western sectional three-cushion billiard championship here yesterday as he lost two games. Welker Cochran, of Los Angeles, former national champion; Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, and Charles Jordan, of Hollywood, remain undefeated.

ROONEYS READY FOR PAPALES

By TOM BIRKS

Classed as the outstanding game of the West Penn Independent Gridiron Conference, the East Liberty Papales and the J. P. Rooneys are primed for the tussle scheduled for Peabody High School Field at 2:30 this afternoon.

With a classy aggregation, the Rooneys will try to go through another season with an undefeated record. Charley Papale wants to avenge the only defeat the club has suffered this season.

Both teams have been getting ready for the fray for a couple of weeks. East Liberty will have its best backfield of the season, with Davis, Seybold, Klinzing, Morbito, Kaiser and Wop Politz to do the ball toting.

Opposed to this classy bunch of former college stars and sandlotters will be Welsh, Wagner, Rooney, Vaughan, Clark and Devinney.

The Rooneys defeated the Papales in the season's opener, 9-0. Since that time Tony Sweet, former Carnegie Tech star, has taken over the coaching reins of the Papales, and many of the intricate Tech plays will be on view against Jimmy Rooney's Pitt system.

VICTORY FOR GLADSTONE

The Gladstone High School won the soccer championship of Section 1 by defeating Westinghouse, 3 to 0, yesterday on the Gladstone field. Crews, Galata and Alberts scored for the winner.

TEAMS LEAVE TODAY

The football and soccer squads of Shady Side Academy leave this afternoon for Buffalo, where they meet the Nichols School teams in intercity games tomorrow.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—A muddy field slowed down Army's last workout for the North Dakota State game. The Cadets had trouble with the slippery ball and lacked co-ordination.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Ray Knell, 160-pound halfback, replaced Jack Hales in Princeton's lineup during the greater part of a drill that was devoted to reviewing the plays the Tigers intend to use against Yale. He may be chosen to start.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Syracuse tapered off for the Colgate game with a long, light drill devoted to signal practice and dummy scrimmage.

VILLANOVA, Pa., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Villanova spent three hours at dummy scrimmage and signal drills preparing for the Detroit game. The Wildcats learned Carroll Cook, fullback, who was injured two weeks ago, will not be able to play.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Three substitutions were named to start for Yale against Princeton, due to injuries to the regulars. They are Nichols at left guard, in place of De Angelis; Howland at center for Malin, and Callan in the backfield, replacing Joe Crowley. Malin and Crowley may be able to play a few minutes. The Elis devoted their final practice largely to passing.

Capt. McEwan Silent As Corcoran Coaches

Neither McEwan nor college officials would comment on the suspension which was announced after the head coach had attempted to remove Bart Sullivan as team trainer following upon a sideline altercation with him during the closing period of the Crusaders' 10-7 defeat by Brown at Providence Saturday.

The Duquesne University Dukes playing the South Dakota State Jack Rabbits at Forbes Field, with the kickoff at 2:30 o'clock.

Meanwhile Carnegie Tech's Tartans slipped out of town at 2 p. m., headed for Cincinnati (Were you ever in Zinzinnati?), where they play Xavier tomorrow in a prelude to the annual city championship tussle with Pitt at the Stadium next Saturday. The Panthers are in the West for their tussle with Nebraska at Lincoln on the morrow.

'NATURAL' AT UNIONTOWN

The Geneva-Waynesburg tilt is a "natural" and got a large play, in view of the fine records of the teams, with Waynesburg having scored its second successive victory over Penn State this fall. St. Vincent's game on the holiday annually draws a throng.

The South Dakota squad has been in Pittsburgh since late Wednesday and worked out at Forbes Field yesterday afternoon. It is coached by Cy Kasper, former Notre Dame star, and hopes to put up a hectic battle against the eleven which last Saturday handed the W. & J. team a defeat on the same gridiron by the surprising score of 19 to 0. The locals will present several changes in their starting lineup, but all of the regulars will get into action during the battle.

OTHER GAMES LISTED

In other Armistice Day games, Bellefonte Academy meets the Bucknell Freshmen in a night game at Williamsport; D. & E. takes on St. Thomas at Scranton; New River meets Concord State down in West Virginia, and Marshall plays Salem at Huntington, W. Va.

W. & J. is set for its Homecoming battle with Bucknell at Washington, Pa., tomorrow. Penn State closes its season prematurely against Temple at Philadelphia, while its freshmen oppose Kiski Prep School at home, and other district teams not in action today do their stuff.

TARTANS BRUSH UP

The Tech squad worked out this morning, no classes being scheduled. The players are due in Cincinnati at 10 o'clock tonight, with every member of the squad in the party with the exception of Bill Carlson, sophomore halfback, who is remaining behind to make up some studies. Xavier is coached by Joe Meyers and Clem Crowe, former St. Vincent mentor. Both are Notre Dame products.

Angelo Bevevino will start at quarterback and Plummer at right tackle in place of Carl Forsman for Tech. The Plaid hopes to get off to an early lead and then rest its regulars for the Pitt battle.

By JULIUS LEVIN

Headed by three class AA conference games and including a flock of class A and class B "naturals," the Armistice Day football program listed for Western Pennsylvania scholastic fans appears to be one of the most attractive of the season.

Greensburg, tied unexpectedly by Wilkinsburg last week, will attempt to stay in the running for the Conference title today by engaging Monessen at Greensburg. In the other Conference games, Washington plays at Charleroi and McKeesport goes to Norwin.

LEADERS IDLE TODAY

New Castle and Jeannette, tied for the lead in this group, are not slated for action today. Jennette will go after its fourth straight Conference victory tomorrow when the Barnes eleven engages Turtle Creek Union at Turtle Creek. New Castle will play a non-league game with Youngstown South tomorrow.

The Homestead High School eleven, boasting a string of four straight victories after a mediocre start, will be seeking its fifth successive triumph by engaging Braddock at Homestead in one of the class A headliners.

Two members of the AA Conference play non-conference games, Wilkinsburg entertaining Swissvale at Wilkinsburg, while Clairton is the host to Aliquippa at Clairton.

SEWICKLEY AT CORAOPOLIS

Washington Township plays at Apollo, West Newton at Derry Borough, Sewickley at Coraopolis, Leetsdale at Etna, New Brighton at Freedom, Beaver Falls at Monaca, Central Catholic at Aspinwall, Edgewood at East McKeesport, Duquesne at Elizabeth, Munhall at Glassport, Verona at Oakmont, Millvale at Springdale, Mt. Pleasant at Canonsburg, Ben Avon at Bellevue, Ford City at Kittanning, Crafton at Bridgeville, Har-Brack at Vandergrift, East Huntingdon at Scottdale, Burgettstown Union at McDonald, Rankin at East Pittsburgh and Redstone at South Brownsville in other important scholastic tilts.

The rules of the Class AA Conference requiring members to play only four class opponents, teams engaging in more than the stipulated number will not receive a higher rating than those which play four games.

RULES PUT END TO SLUGGING

By Howard Harpster

Before the new ruling went into effect this year which limited the use of the hands by defensive linemen to warding off the offensive linemen, and did away with striking opponents on the head with the open hand, some of the scrimmages in the line were anything but gentle. Under the old rule, which permitted striking with the open hand, it was not uncommon for a defensive player to forget, in the heat of the battle, to keep his fists open, with the result that a goodly number of rabbit punches and right and left jabs were exchanged during the course of the games.

Although it was in direct violation of the rules to use such tactics, almost all linemen expected to be the target of a few swings and some even invited them, knowing that when the opponents gained possession of the ball there would be a chance for retaliation. Occasionally, when the feud appeared to be a tie, and each participant was convinced that his opponent was just as tough as he was, a truce would be called and the hands would be opened up again. This prize-fighting practice was not taught by coaches, for the players hardly could be carrying out their duties while spending their time demonstrating their punch to the opposition. The boys thought up the idea themselves, and how they got any enjoyment out of the "fun" is beyond me, but evidently they did, or why would they come around after the games and boast to the backfield men about how hard they had been hit?

BLACK EYES COMMON

While playing at Tech I was a little skeptical about the tales the linemen used to tell concerning their warfare with the opposition. Standing back on the defense in a backfield position, it was, of course, impossible to see what was going on in the line. However, in the dressing room after one of our hardest games, four of our linesmen came over to where I was standing, and from that moment on I never doubted their word. Three of them had a black eye each, and the fourth had both eyes shut. The spokesman for the four said:

"Well, I suppose you think we got these picking daisies."

Don Lovewell, the Geneva line coach, who was a teammate of mine at Tech for three years, playing a guard position, tells of his initiation into the linesmen's secret order of closed fists. It happened during a play on which the opponents were forced to kick, and our linemen grabbed each opponent in front of them by the jersey and threw him to the ground instead of rushing the kicker, the idea being to keep the linemen from coming down the field, thus permitting our ball carrier to return the kick.

LOVEWELL'S EXPERIENCE

Don grabbed his man and started to throw him, when bang, his boy friend landed a straight jab right on the end of Don's nose. During the next few plays, Lovewell spent much of his time trying to gather together the various parts of his flattened nose, and his opponent on the other side of the line made the sympathetic comment that he had a great deal to learn about playing a guard position. Lovewell replied:

"I'll say I have if I ever want to play it as 'dirty' as you do."

A few plays later, the opponents kicked again, and this time, instead of throwing his newly-discovered instructor to the ground, Don let one fly, and, not having had sufficient experience, missed his target, but landed squarely on the fellow's Adam's apple. For a full five minutes the wise one sputtered around, holding his neck and not able to talk. Finally he recovered his voice somewhat and said:

"Say buddy, you surely learn fast."

Whereupon he let Lovewell alone for the remainder of the game and worked out on some of our other players.

PITT 'SECONDS' TO OPEN TILT

few minutes against the Irish after the game already had been won.

The trials and tribulations which had beset him, some of which were his own doing, might have caused Reider to quit cold. He was practically beaten out of his job at halfback by Mike Sebastian. He had a tough row ahead in his school work. Where once he'd had friends by the thousands, he found himself attacked on all sides. They said he couldn't take it. But they didn't know.

Reider started his rejuvenation at the right point. He hit the books, consumed oil midnight oil and brought to Dean Holbrook, chairman of the eligibity committee of the University, a note from each of his instructors, showing that he'd passed all his work with a "B" average. Paul said:

"Whatever has happened between myself and the team and school has been my own fault. I'm not a quitter. I'm still a good football player and I'm going t oprove it. Dr. Sutherland has been mighty square with me. He is a great coach and a real friend. If he doesn't think I should be in there, O. K. . . . I'll be pulling my heart out on the bench for Sebastian and for the team. But when I do get in—I'm going to go. I'll show 'em all."

That is what Reider told this correspondent last night. The kid is determined. He's learned a big lesson and learned it as a real man. He's a better football player, a better leader and a better boy for it today, and he's ready to break out in a rash of footballing that will strike with the fury of a tornado. When he breaks—duck. It will be time to take to the cyclone-cellar and close the door tight.

RACQUETS RACE BEGINS NOV. 26

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Advent of crisp weather hustles the indoor sports campaign toward center of the picture, not the least of which is the recently popularized diversion of squash racquets. Formal hostilities for the four-wall racqueters will get under way on Saturday, November 26, according to announcement yesterday by McCook Reed, Steel City singles champion and secretary of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association, governing body of the game hereabouts.

The P. S. R. A. Inter-Club League will enter its third season of competition with the same group of franchise-holders as graced the list last winter. This means that P. A. A., Keystone A. C., Pittsburgh Golf Club, University Club, and Allegheny Country Club will seek honors of Class A, while P. A. A., Pittsburgh Golf Club, Keystone A. C., and Edgeworth Club will battle for Class B distinction. Titles in both divisions will be defended by Coach Harold Mortlock's Winged Head arrays, which pounded through to stirring finishes in the 1932 chase.

Question as to the re-entry of Allegheny Country Club for the impending campaign has apparently been settled with assurance of continuance of the Sewickley contingent in the milling.

The season's bill will, as usual, consist of round robin action on home-and-home basis. The card will be released in its entirety within the next few days.

Officers of the racquet organization for the coming year are A. L. Robinson, Jr., A. C. C., president; W. Y. Cocken, K. A. C., vice president; W. McCook Reed, P. G. C., secretary-treasurer. The executive committee consists of the officers, plus James M. Bovard and D. M. Gilmore, A. C. C.; C. A. Fagan, Jr., and Frank S. White, University Club; W. A. Gordon, Edgeworth Club, and Percy D. Siverd and Frank S. McClintock, P. A. A.

Winter in Lincoln May Hurt Pitt 'Gate'

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Wintry gales from the North practically had swept away today the prospect of a capacity attendance at Memorial Stadium here tomorrow for the annual gridiron struggle of the Pittsburgh Panthers and the Nebraska Cornhuskers.

John Selleck, business manager of athletics, still was hoping for a good day, however, and said that if warmer weather prevails the crowd probably will reach 25,000. If it remains cold he believes attendance will be approximately 20,000.

TROJANS FACE TOUGH TEST IN OREGON

WARNER'S SELECTIONS

Washington over Washington State.
Southern California over Oregon.
Oregon State over Montana.
California over Idaho.
Stanford over California Aggies.
St. Mary's over U. S. L. A.
Nevada over Olympic Club.
West Coast Navy over West Coast Army.
Santa Clara over San Francisco.

By GLENN S. (POP) WARNER

Member All-America Board of Football. (Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

Pop Warner

One of the most interesting games in the Far West tomorrow will be that between Washington and Washington State. Here the two teams are fighting for a state championship and the rivalry is very keen. Both institutions are represented by very fine and well-coached teams. It looks like an even battle to me, although I think Washington has a slight edge.

Oregon will try to stop the winning streak of the U. S. C. Trojans but I hardly think that U. S. C. will be seriously threatened. However a few breaks against them, instead of in their favor, might bring about a Trojan downfall.

Stamford is supposed to have a "breather" with the California Aggies, which is very welcome after three rough games. California will defeat Idaho, but it is not a game to be taken lightly by the Bears.

Oregon should win from Montana. Coach Schissler has developed a very fine team in spite of several defeats. I expect to see St. Mary's come back strong in their game with U. S. L. A., and they are very likely to put a stop to the latter's unbeaten record. Santa Clara should defeat San Francisco, but the Broncos will have to extend themselves.

The game today between the West Coast Army and West Coast Navy brings together the very best football talent in these two branches of the service on the Pacific Coast. This annual Armistice Day game at Berkeley presents a spectacle and a brand of football in every way comparable to the game between the Army and Navy in the East. This year the indications are that the Navy will win.

COTTON PRICES IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Cotton futures open steady, 1 higher to 4 lower on trade buying of near months and commission house selling on disappointing Liverpool cables. December, 6.36c; January, 6.43; March, 6.47c; May, 6.61c; July, 6.72c; October, 6.87c.

December was relatively firm at the start, selling up to 6.38 on trade buying or covering, but the price soon slipped off with the balance of the list under realizing combined with some further southern selling. At the end of the first half hour the general market was about 5 to 7 points net lower except for January, which had been relatively firm at the close yesterday and sold about 13 points net lower early today.

Buying became more active later in the morning and prices advanced sharply on the demand which came from the trade and commission houses and probably included some broadening of interest as well as some covering and rebuying by recent sellers. Prices worked up to 6.58 for December and 6.85 for May or about 22 to 24 points net higher on active positions. The market was steady and within 2 or 3 points of the best at midday.

Fort Pitt Brewing Has Strong Cash Position

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

THE PROBABILITY that beer will be legalized in the near future has resulted in widespread public demand for the securities of brewing companies. This has been reflected in sharp rises in the prices of the brewing stocks.

In many cases, however, the brewing companies are burdened with heavy bonded indebtedness and with preferred stock on which there are accumulated and unpaid dividends. Unsatisfactory cash positions usually are found, and many of the plants have been idle for so many years that large expenditures will be necessary in order to put them into

STOCK LEADERS EXTEND GAINS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—In the most active trading in nearly a month, the post-election bull movement in the stock market rolled forward today.

Prices pushed up 1 to more than 4 points in the earlier hours of trading, sharply extending the gains of the previous session. As in yesterday's session, however, the market had a spell of hesitancy around midday, in which extreme advances were pared down by fractions, or in some cases as much as a point.

Rails were again in the lead, with advances of around 4 points in Union Pacific and Norfolk and Western.

Professional activity continued to dominate the price trends in shares, however, a number of wire houses reporting that public participation was still small. The rails, particularly, were said to be benefiting from short covering. American Telephone, another stock which had been a recent bear target, both from large professional operators and small speculators, was likewise boosted by covering.

The principal influence which lent an encouraging background to sentiment concerning the rails continued to come from the prospect of a report, early next year, from the non-partisan Coolidge Commission. The day's news was not especially favorable. St. Paul, for instance, was stated in preliminary estimates to show net operating income of about $1,400,000 in October against $1,470,477 in September. The October figure, however, compared favorably with the corresponding 1931 figure, which was $1,179,977.

The weekly mercantile reviews were moderately encouraging. Bradstreet's reported that "the volume of production and distribution has held up well in spite of the retarding influence of the election," and Dun's found that "the steadiness of retail business is an indication of strength, and a broadening of the seasonal revival doubtless will be manifest right up to the close of the year."

The oil shares derived some help from the information that the Texas House and Senate had passed the new oil conservation law.

The British foreign trade figures furnished some faint indication of a possible expansion of international commerce. Imports into the United Kingdom in October were £60,828,000, against £54,266,000 in September. Exports were £30,440,000, against £26,228,000.

COURT PONDERS 'PIT' APPEAL

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today had under advisement the appeal of the Chicago Board of Trade from an order of a federal commission suspending its activity for 60 days for refusal to admit the Farmers National Grain Corporation to membership in its clearing corporation.

The case was argued before the three judges of the court yesterday.

The suspension order had been made by three cabinet members. The government yesterday argued the Farmers National was qualified for membership under the provisions of the grain futures act and contended the board's rules for membership of corporations were not applicable in cases involving co-operatives.

Attorneys representing the board of trade said the Farmers National had not complied with requests for information regarding its financial structure and operations.

Richfield Accepts S. O. California Bid

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—(AP.)—Acceptance of the Standard Oil Company of California terms of $22,500,000 for the purchase of the Richfield Oil Company properties today opened the way for the Standard Company to strengthen greatly its position as a dominant factor in the West Coast's oil industry.

G. Parker Toms, chairman of the bank creditors' committee, announced the acceptance of the Standard bid in behalf of the bank creditors, the Richfield bond holders and the unsecured trade creditors' committee.

The Richfield Company has been in receivership since 1930.

Independent Brewing Shows Bigger Loss

Current assets amounted to $86,788 against current liabilities of $22,666. Cash amounted to $17,387. The company has an additional liability of $125,001 which represents accrued interest on bond in indebtedness suspended by consent of bondholders to July 1, 1933.

Elizabeth and Her Infant Daughter Return to Live With Louisa

CHAPTER XX.

Reluctant April sunlight slanted through the curtains. Elizabeth Sheldon stood by the window and looked out into the streets. Cruel to bring me back to this house—cruel, she thought.

She sat down upon a round velvet chair and closed her eyes. The house was very quiet. The baby was out with Nanna, an old Nanna, gray and stooped, but a Nanna who knew all about babies, who was never weary of comparing little Joyce with the young father Joyce would only know by tradition, legend.

"The image of him. Mrs. Sheldon, ma'am. See how her hair grows. In just the selfsame tunnel—and the way she smiles—and her blessed blue eyes."

It seemed to Elizabeth, sitting there and remembering, that Nanna's ejaculations filled the empty room. She twisted her head from side to side, there was an intolerable pressure, an aching, at the nape of her neck. If only she could get away from Nanna—from Cousin Louisa—from the house—if only she could take her baby home, back to Boston.

Henrietta had gotten away. Henrietta had died, while they were still abroad. That was why they had come earlier than Louisa had intended. Death had put a key in Henrietta's hand. Had she been afraid of it—afraid to turn it in the lock?

SITUATION UNQUESTIONED

Every one had seemed to take it as a matter of course that Elizabeth shouldn't go home, shouldn't find work, something to do, somehow. They had all thought it quite fitting and natural that she and the baby should live on, in Cousin Louisa's house, on Cousin Louisa's charity—My son's wife and child make their home with me.

No one thought to blame George Sheldon for not having changed his will.

Now and then Elizabeth was alone, as she was today. Not often. Since their return from England the house had been filled with callers—and there were calls to be made in return, soberly, as befitted people who were in mourning. Her life consisted of smiling mechanically at people whose faces were blurred and shadowy. Duties she had none. She had not been even able to nurse her child.

Sometimes, as now, she tried to look back. It was an effort, almost superhuman, to force her mind back, back into darkness, into the narrow prison house of terror, incredulity. There were several days that had been erased completely from her memory, as lost to her as if she had never endured living them. She remembered going to the docks. She remembered the ship. She had hated the ship.

Italy in the spring. In the villa which Louisa had rented there were stone floors on which the sunlight fell with a cool radiance. Outside a garden of a hundred shifting hues. Elizabeth remembered long hours lying in a basket chair, her tired eyes soon shrinking from color, resting for relief on the dark strength and completeness of an enormous cypress.

She remembered blue nights, dark blue. She remembered olive groves, fruit trees, skies as clear as water, water as blue as skies. She remembered dark faces and bright birds and a strange language. She remembered endless conversations, which ended nowhere.

"He died in my arms—mine."

Over and over. And that other attempt which ended in agony. "He didn't know you!"

That was a little, lean flame of triumph flickering up from her dazed, dead heart. She had stirred her thickening body in the long chair as she spoke, looking toward the cypress.

"He knew me, Elizabeth."

DAUGHTER IS BORN

Oh, the woman had lied—she must have lied.

Lennox, you said she should never hurt me.

Lennox had failed her, she thought vaguely. He had escaped, he had condemned her to this imprisonment, manacled to the hand that struck at her without cessation.

Italy and then England. A nursing home. Pain, good pain, pain that she could set her teeth in, that she could fight and be glad of because it seemed to have no relation to herself, seemed an extraneous thing, an outsider, a definite, tangible enemy. A clean pain, unclouded and—unshared.

Louisa had named the baby Joyce, after her own mother's people. Louisa had said, merely, "A pity she isn't a boy—"

Elizabeth had been glad, lying there in the nursing home with the thick yellow fog pressing against the panes, that the baby had not been a boy. A girl would be more her own, she thought. A very little girl. Why, she was only 21 years older than her baby—they could be friends, and some day when she came alive again, they could play together.

Now they were back in the house on Washington square, Louisa, Elizabeth and Joyce.

She had not much minded not being able to nurse the baby. She'd been so weak. But Louisa had been glad. Why?

Now she rose, listless, and drifted about the big room. Her finger tips rested on objects, on walls and furniture, as the fingers of the blind do.

This house had no reality. It would never have. Strange that anything so overpoweringly solid, rooted, should be so unsubstantial. Her knuckles grazed against the sharp corner of a marquetry table. She withdrew her hand, looked down broodingly at the scratch, the little ooze of blood. That wasn't real either. Things that didn't exist had no power to wound her, had they?

Louisa Sheldon came briskly into the room. She walked heavily for so spare a woman. Her hair had grayed, but the thin, sallow face was unlined, the eyes were dark and bright. Her glance slid over her daughter-in-law, the too slender figure, the tumbled pale hair.

Louisa glanced at a clock.

"It is time you dressed," she said. "The Van Alstynes are coming to tea."

Elizabeth liked the Van Alstynes, when she stopped to consider them. Mrs. Van Alstyne was kind. Elizabeth was sorry for Fred, he had cared for Lennox. But they were not real to her either.

"Couldn't I stay upstairs with the baby?"

"Don't be ridiculous, my dear. You will have to learn that life goes on. Joyce came in half an hour ago with Nanna. Now run along, you will have just time to change."

Synopsis

Mrs. Louisa Sheldon, aristocratic widow, who idolizes her son, Lennox, above all things else on earth, is arranging details of his wedding to Elizabeth Howland. Mrs. Sheldon in secret decided to marry off Lennox to some nice girl more than two years before when he attended a party where giddy girls of no social standing had made merry with the boys. Mrs. Sheldon took command of wedding plans and sent Elizabeth home to visit her family for a few months. Lennox goes to Boston to see Elizabeth. They decide to elope, but Louisa spoils their plans. Louisa orders an almost immediate marriage and rushes the wedding plans. Lennox gets a cold and after the wedding ceremonies he becomes very sick. He dies of pneumonia within two days.

Isn't It So?

The heiress who marries a man to reform him may make good by using plenty of the gold cure.

Swallows are harmless birds, but taking too many of them has put many a man down and out.

When two men meet and like each other, it is a sure sign that their wives will hate each other when they meet.

There are times when a man gets to the point where he begins to look upon the inlaws as outlaws.

It Was a Lot of Prunes

We're glad that the political clouds are blowing the other way. It seems but yesterday we cast our vote and we suspect that it ain't been tabulated yet.

We've got enough troubles anyway. How about that New York lady who got a divorce because her legal, lawful, wedded mistake insisted on nothing but prunes for breakfast, dinner and supper?

Prunes for supper ain't so bad. But we know that even a wild game expert couldn't look a prune in the face at breakfast and bring it back alive.

When informed of the prunish cruelty the judge had no hesitation in staking the lady to her girlish suffrage.

Note the learned wiseacre's remarks in giving the wife her roving scholarship:

"I find that the prune is a dried and desiccated fruit lacking all natural juices and reflexes. It is a dehydrated and amended plum.

"As a law student in my balmy days I had many experiences with the prune and lost them all. Rather than chew them I swallowed them whole, seed and bones. Before I graduated I got the prune complex. I ate them once a day for four years and swore that if I became a successful barrister I would save up my money and buy a grapefruit.

"Therefore, I can visualize the terrors of this lady who was forced to eat them three times a day. But, on the other hand, I find her guilty of contributory negligence. She should have had enough will power to starve.

"Nevertheless, and notwithstanding, I award her a graduating diploma. One prune a day is a threat. Twice a day is intimidation. And prunes for all three meals is assault with intent to economize."

And so the lady walked out of the courtroom free as air at a filling station. And when she sails to Europe we are going to send her a big steamer basket. And we bet even money she's going to be afraid to look into it. There might be one there among the apples, the pears and the glazed fruit.

HERE'S THAT QUICK WAY TO STOP A COLD

That Doctors Advise As The Fastest, Surest Way

FOLLOW DIRECTIONS IN THESE PICTURES

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throat eases this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drugstore.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

Embarrassing Moments

Dear Embarrassing Moments Editor:

At a football game the other afternoon, I sat behind a gentleman who was continually leaping to his feet in the excitement of the moment. Once when he jumped up and began waving his arms, I also arose, wishing to see what was going on, and carefully placed on the seat before me a large substantial tack I happened to have in my hand at the moment. Imagine my embarrassment when he sat down again.

Yours in confusion,

Teachers' Salaries

There Is Much to Be Said Against Reducing Them for An Interminable Period.

Years of struggle were required to raise the salaries of Pennsylvania's public school teachers to a fair level.

Now, because of the taxpayers' difficulties, it is proposed to reduce the salaries by repealing or amending the Edmonds act.

Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools and chairman of the finance committee of the Pennsylvania Education Congress, recommended at a meeting of the congress in Harrisburg this week, that the minimum and maximum standards of salaries fixed by the Edmonds act be reduced 10 per cent for the next two years, but with the proviso that they shall return to the present levels in 1935.

If conditions two years hence should require continuance of the lower salaries, the Legislature meeting in that year could provide accordingly.

There is much to be said in favor of Dr. Graham's plan. To cut the salaries for an interminable period might make it difficult for the teachers to gain a fair emolument when prosperity returns.

Pittsburgh teachers who have voluntarily taken a 10 per cent cut this year are typical of the profession. In return for their willingness to make a sacrifice now they should be given some assurance that they will again receive their customary salaries when conditions warrant.

Unity in Narcotic War

Uniform Legislation by All the States Is Necessary for Success in the Fight Against Drugs.

Without a dissenting voice, the American Bar Association has promptly given the power and prestige of its emphatic approval to the final draft of the uniform narcotic drug act recently indorsed by the forty-second annual conference of commissioners on uniform state laws.

Backed by the commendation of these two national organizations, representing the lawyers and the law enforcing agencies of every state in the Union, this legislative proposal now goes to the governors of the several states for submission to the next session of their respective legislatures.

The first draft of this proposed law was prepared over 10 years ago. Little attention was paid to it until two years ago, when vigorous efforts were launched to bring to the support of federal narcotic legislation the aid of all the states.

To date, however, only four states in the Union—California, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and New York—have begun to discharge their responsibilities to their citizens by passing effective laws against illicit traffic in habit-forming drugs.

Meantime the effectiveness of federal narcotic legislation is seriously impaired by the failure of more than 40 states in the Union to support the federal government's warfare against the drug evil by state legislation.

Not until every state in the Union writes into its law the uniform narcotic drug act, which the commissioners on uniform state laws and the American Bar Association unite in recommending, will the people of the United States get the protection they deserve from government against the drug peddler and his poisonous wares.

It now becomes the duty of the governors of the several states to take the lead in impressing upon their legislatures the urgent importance of passing the uniform state narcotic drug act when next they meet.

Until all the states in the Union unite with the federal government in aggressive warfare against illicit traffic in narcotic drugs, the drug evil will continue to undermine the moral and physical welfare of the household of the nation and make America a warning, instead of an example, in the family of nations.

The Passing of Rancor

How Quickly Time Dissipates Hatred Is Seen in the Election of a Former Enemy Alien to Congress.

Fritz Kreisler, the Austrian violinist, gave a recital in Carnegie Music Hall on January 15, 1920. Although the war had been over for more than a year feeling still ran high. That a former enemy alien should be permitted to give a public performance in Pittsburgh so soon was regarded by many as outrageous. There was such a clamor of protest that tickets for this particular concert were not sold, and on the night of the recital no one was admitted to the auditorium except those who held season tickets for the complete course of concerts in which the Kreisler performance was included.

The next year another Austrian came to the United States. His name was Henry Ellenbogen, and he has just been elected to Congress from the very district in which Kreisler met with such hostility 12 years ago. So quickly has the war rancor passed.

The election of this former enemy alien to Congress is a tribute to the goodwill and magnanimity of the American people—qualities which make it impossible for them to cherish hatreds long.

The campaign which ended Tuesday was marked by much bitterness. It will soon be forgotten.

Voting Machines Upheld

Philadelphians Call for the Devices, the Advantages of Which Are Again Demonstrated.

Most Philadelphians usually vote as the city Republican machine dictates, but they refused, in Tuesday's election, to sanction a proposal to give up voting machines and return to the use of paper ballots.

Notwithstanding that Philadelphia has had difficulties of one sort or another with the mechanical devices, the citizens, confronted with the question, "Shall the use of voting machines be discontinued?" answered with an emphatic negative.

The advantages of voting machines were again demonstrated. Returns came in early from districts where they were used. Allegheny County districts were in many cases inexcusably slow in reporting. In a number of districts in the Strip, where several of the Republican candidates were hard pressed by Democratic opponents, the returns were deliberately withheld.

The County Commissioners will be remiss in their duty if they ever again require the citizens to vote with the old-fashioned paper ballots.

'Lest We Forget'—An American Recessional

Lord God of hosts, we come again
With contrite hearts, and humbly pray
That peace on earth, goodwill to men
Shall usher in Thy perfect day
When warlike banners are unfurled
No more, and justice rules the world.

For that we pray: And yet we know
Thou wouldst not have us stand, O Lord,
Unarmed before a sudden foe,
Like teeming Asia's restless horde,
But as Thy people stood of old—
Serene in faith in Thee, and bold.

Yea, bold to strike when alien wrongs
Assail us, though not overbold
To conquer: Unto us belongs
The simple right to have and hold
This freedom, and this favored land
That came from Thy benignant hand.

Thy day of peace will dawn, O God,
When Thou hast willed it. Till that day
Our task it is to guard the sod
Made sacred by the fathers' clay.
And till that day hath come, O Lord,
We dare not throw away the sword!

Ladies Must Love

Marriage is the ultimate proof that most women think 'tis better to be fooled half of the time, than to be lonely all of the time.

A sensitive young man should be perfectly sure of his heart before he gives it into a strong woman's keeping, these days. She might decide not to let him have it back again.

When a woman who thinks she has exclusive rights to a man's heart discovers that he is syndicating his kisses — that's where the test begins!

A savage must have blood, a gourmand must have food, and a woman MUST have her quota of romance. If she can't get it first hand, she'll take it vicariously over the radio—which is why most men hate a crooner.

A man's ideal woman is one in whose credo cigarette ashes are good for the rugs, wet tumblers "won't hurt" the mahogany, midnight lunches are "nourishing" and poker parties relax the nerves.

No smart modern woman would think of having plain old-fashioned chills-and-fever, when she can have high blood-pressure for practically the same money.

It usually requires two women to take the conceit out of one man. The one who refuses him and "breaks his heart"—and the one who marries him and breaks his will.

Your Strength

You may be strong as Samson
And brave as few men are,
With courage like a torch of flame
To lead you high and far;
But yet your steps may falter
And sometimes you may fail,
For this proud strength of yours alone
Can not always prevail.

But, oh! if someone trusts you
And knows that you will win,
What splendid battles you can wage
Against all fear, all sin!
You may be weak as water
And weary unto death;
But you can rise and conquer still
If someone just has faith!

For not your own strength only
Can make you wise and true;
But that strange power which you gain
From someone's faith in you!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Thoughts while strolling: I confuse Digby Bell with Kyrle Belew. For anthropologists: Harry K. Thaw's magnificently shaped head. There's a better taste, anyway, to the glue on three-cent stamps. Whatever became of Napoleon Lajoie? Clifton Webb makes me think of a Palmer Brownie.

One-word description of Billy Gaxton—shiny. Nick Kenney, the radio columnist. The wise-crackers of the old Palace corner now clot around broadcasting stations. A white poodle, with a black raincoat—crepe de chien? Richard Lockbridge, the town's youngest dramatic critic. Also a recent author.

Christopher Morley, a Haverford (Pa.) boy, who made good in the city. Bill Robinson's lop-sided brown derby and levee swagger. Russel — one l, please — Crouse, who quit columning to ballyhoo. An acute angle is his profile in caricature. Also, Arthur William Brown's.

Installment jewelry houses opening again. Meaning—you guess! Leo Lindamann, the restaurateur known to Broadway as Lindy. Ted Saucier has the neatest cropped mustache in town. Charles B. Dillingham in front of the Astor. I always want to sneak up and straighten his derby.

Those all-night barber shops featuring "hot towel service." Whose idea was that of heaven—a place where one may loll in a barber's chair and have endless hot towels on a freshly shaved face? Harry Hansen, the book critic, and Charles B. Driscoll look alike. So do V. V. McNitt and Thomas Mitchell, the actor.

Johnny Farrar and partner, Stanley Rinehart—two more of the boy publishers, and doing a swell job, too. After all, what is more stirring than a fresh flag rippling against a clean sky. Or do you sense a strain of mawkishness today? All right, then, I'll follow the parade!

One film firm's trade mark is a rooster. Another a lion. A third seeks a similar emblem. And Mickey Nielan, who doesn't care for them, suggests a rat.

H. N. Swanson left a collegiate magazine editorial chair for movie lots. His first activity concerned, quite naturally, a football film. To his undieing credit, the finished script contained no game won at the last moment, a ukulele or a coach giving the bunch a tongue-lashing in the dressing room between periods.

I cherish a vague hope that the next columnist film—if they must produce them—will sustain similar reality. The majority of columnists over the land are not filling water coolers with gin, haunting night clubs, dashing into stars' dressing rooms, telling the managing editor to go sit on a tack or being received at the White house. Columnists, I know—and I'm acquainted with most—are the most self-effacing members of editorial staffs. The movie generalization, that the columnist is a bombastic swell-head, may fit a specific type. But that breed is in the minority.

The first big league columnist I knew intimately was the late Charles R. Barnes, flashing too briefly across the journalistic horizon. In many ways the most gifted, he had the owlish, detached manner of Ring Lardner and was the same stickler for writing purity. In two years, he assembled the most enthusiastic following any columnist—outside of B. L. T.—ever collected. His pillar bore the rather homely title: "All Sorts." But he wearied. Applause became wormwood, and he was likely first of the clan to quit at popularity's peak. He wrote hilarious short stories for pulps a while, and was just cracking into gloss gazettes when he threw down his pen again and succumbed to wanderlust. A curious anomaly—a great writer who actually despised writing.

My contract with Barnes grew out of his skewering the country jake items I wrote for a Middle West daily and captioning them mirthfully. One, I recall blushingly, was a personal jotting: "Miss Dora Dodd rocked off her back porch last night and lit on a rake," which Barnes headlined: "Served the Roue Right." In last lingering days from California, he paid me one of the finest compliments I ever received. In view of his earlier rigging, I was immeasurably thrilled.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Why do people run amuck?

Steady, conventional people who have always led respectable lives—why do they suddenly explode into some sensational act?

You've seen it happen dozens of times. And it has bewildered you; made you wonder whether human beings could ever be trusted; perhaps made you a little afraid of yourself. Could YOU do such a thing—break loose from all your established habits, cast yourself adrift from your family and friends? It doesn't seem possible. Yet those others did it. Why?

Capt. John H. Ayres tells why in that amazing book, "MISSING MEN," which he has written in collaboration with Carol Bird. And if ever a man had the opportunity to learn why men become lost, it is Capt. Ayers.

Have you ever had need to appeal to the Missing Persons Bureau of the New York Police Department? Let's hope you never will. Steel gray, steel gaunt rooms, with the sound of shuffling feet whimpering down the long corridors and the whine of the East Side seeping in over the sill.

Cops' rooms—grimy plaster and worn linoleum, such as you'll find all over the world, in the places where life cracks up. And nothing extraordinary about the dingy room where a tall, spare man with wind-red cheeks and ice-clear eyes sits quietly all day long. And yet—

If you have the stuff in you to catch it, you'll be seeing another scene, hearing another sound. You'll be seeing the stagnant waste of Sargasso Sea. And you'll be hearing the wail of the ships, and the souls, that are lost in its stagnant tide.

For this Bureau of Missing Men is a human Sargasso. Here come the lost, and those who search for the lost. A thousand tragic stories, yet only one reason behind them all.

"THEY LOST THEIR PERSPECTIVE," says Capt. John Ayers.

Through this city they all pass, sooner or later—those men who have cast themselves adrift from their normal world. And, in 98 per cent of the cases, Capt. Ayers finds them. An amazing record, that! And perhaps the secret of the record is the fact that this man tries to understand the defeated heart before he searches for the delinquent body.

To the world they have left, many of these missing men and women are criminals. But John Ayers does not see them as criminals. He sees them as sick souls who had a reason, even if it was a sick reason, for their act.

The man who deserted the wife who loved him too much; the innocent girl who went bad because she thought she had become a social "untouchable;" the sober, reliable housewife who disappeared with a worthless rascal because her husband had forgotten how to play; the beautiful, fantastic baroness who adored her lover when she saw him in a dream, but refused to accept him when he appeared in the flesh; the woman who killed herself because she was afraid to die; the man who dived into the water at Rye Beach, New York, and came up at Miami, Florida—one after another these people, with scores more quicken into life out of Capt. Ayers' memory, under Carol Bird's magic pen.

A New York "Arabian Nights," with tales that can't be true—but are! And one reason for every tragic tale: "They lost perspective. They were too close to their individual difficulties to appraise them properly and, as a result, they magnified them, colored them and imagined them as unsolvable."

Why do respectable people suddenly run amuck? Why do serious, steady lives crack up? That's why.

THEY LIVE TOO CLOSE TO THEIR OWN DIFFICULTIES. They concentrate so upon their own problems that, presently, they are seeing nothing but their own problems. The world is shut out—and they lose all perspective. They do not want to be bad nor go mad. But, little by little, their own selfish, egotistical concentration on their personal problems cuts them off from the human scene. In spirit they are "missing men." Often their bodies follow their spirits, and they are actually lost.

Could YOU become "a missing person?" YOU CERTAINLY COULD!

IF YOU CONCENTRATE ON YOUR OWN TROUBLES UNTIL THEY LOOM LARGER THAN ANY OTHER PROBLEM, YOU WILL BECOME A MISSING PERSON AS SURE AS GOD MADE LITTLE APPLES!

Your body may be hanging around, making a nuisance of itself, BUT YOUR SOUL WILL BECOME A NAMELESS WANDERER.

Read that book and see how easy it is for any human to lose himself.

Railroad Stock-Jobbing

The National Transportation Committee Should Investigate the Manipulation of Securities.

By JULIUS G. BERENS

This is a vast subject, solution of which probably requires more than the three months' survey which is the tenure of the committee.

Yet the composition of this committee promises that it will not ignore the very patent abuses which certainly have contributed to the chaotic financial condition of the railroad industry.

If they ignore these abuses, the findings of the non-partisan body will represent a waste of time and effort, a further disappointment in the much to be desired inquiry into the true causes of the railroads' troubles.

First and foremost, naturally, any survey of railway difficulties will recognize the primary influence of lessened traffic. Correction of this condition is beyond the capacity of the committee.

The committee has unlimited evidence of the dangers inherent in wild stock-buying, swapping of securities, frantic "bidding for control," etc., the net results of which are vividly portrayed in the current fiscal quandary of numerous railroads. Specifically, there is a live example in the serious situation in which the Nickel Plate now finds itself.

This sizable railroad has defaulted on a $20,000,000 maturity. The Federal Court denied a receivership application at this time, but this action fails to alleviate the road from its predicament.

What relationship has this individual road's financial troubles to the whole railroad problem? The answer is found in an analysis of the cause of the Nickel Plate's predicament:

It will be found that the $20,000,000 debt which the road is unable to pay was originally incurred to provide funds for "acquisition of controlling interest in the Wheeling and Lake Erie."

The Wheeling and Lake Erie purchase was a most welcome relief for a holding company controlled by the same interests who dominate Nickel Plate. Here was a stock deal the cost of which has brought a major railroad to the brink of receivership.

It is not an isolated instance, although other practitioners of this art of high and fancy stock activities have thus far avoided receivership.

But who will deny that the hundreds of millions of dollars of railroad money dissipated in reckless buying, at preposterous levels, of stocks and bonds have been a major cause of the railroad industry's present financial embarrassment?

Security-holders suffer, by reason of the disaster wrought to their properties.

The public suffers because of the clamor for "rates which will support the railroads," while the railway managers are wasting vast sums to satisfy personal ambitions for power, to throttle competitive ambitions.

Labor suffers because the railroad managements plead poverty and ask lower wage scales.

The managements charge the depression with sole responsibility for the railroads' dire straits, but they fail to mention their own shameful role in the dissipation of immense capital which if preserved even today would maintain the railroads in reasonably satisfactory condition.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

In fact, you like to hear yourself talk and give very little thought to what might happen if you were taken seriously.

Don't you want to be thought well balanced?

Can you afford to be considered a "lightweight?"

Why dramatize yourself to no real purpose?

Do you like to hear the question asked, "who said so" when some of your talk is reported and then when your name is mentioned hear the exclamation, "Oh well, that does not mean much."

Not a very dignified position for one who wishes to be thought something in the community.

Of course you have a rather scrappy disposition, but you could curb it.

You need self-control.

If you know certain things are wrong and have some constructive ideas as to how to remedy them, get yourself together and get a hearing some day.
